GOOD AERATION NEEDED IN FERMENTING CIDER

In making vinegar, care is taken to aerate the fermenting cider well, says E. H. Wiegand, horticulturist for the Oregon experiment station. This is necessary to get a proper vinegar strength.

Barrels in which the fermentation is taking place are firmly supported on the sides with holes drilled above the vinegar level at each end of the barrel. This allows free circulation of air. After fermentation has started, the barrel is not disturbed.

Unsuccessful vinegar making is usually due to filling the barrels too full, preventing free circulation of air. Low acetic acid content of vinegar is usually due to low sugar content. Sugar completely fermented will yield a high test vinegar.

PECTIN FOR FRUIT JELL IS MADE BY HOUSEWIFE

Pectin for future jellmaking is best preserved at this season of the year by Oregon housewives, says E. H. Wiegand, horticulturist for the experiment station. A home supply may be made by taking apple peels or small apples and simmering them for two hours with a slight addition of water.

The juice extracted is best preserved in well stoppered bottles. The bottles are sterilized either in hot water at 180 to 190 degrees F. for 30 minutes or by one tenth of 1 per cent by weight benzoate of soda.

Combined with various fruit juices this product will make a good grade of jelly. Proportions to use are one part of pectin, and three parts of fruit juice, to four parts of sugar.

NEW INTERNATIONAL APPEAL FOR REFUGEES

Geneva, Switzerland.—A joint appeal from twenty nations has been placed before the League of Nations, asking for the appointment of a commission to assist the American Near East Relief in its work for refugees in Greece and Bible Lands. The appeal says: "In view of the international character of the question involved and the necessity for an impartial, accurate and authoritative statement of the situation, we request the League of Nations to appoint a commission which shall make a prompt, thorough inquiry into the distressing conditions in the Near East and indicate what steps should be taken to ameliorate these conditions in accord with humanitarian views of our twentieth century life."

TO BLESS AMERICANS

Moscow.—The annual ceremony of the Armenian church, known as the "Blessing of the Americans," will take place at Erivan, Caucasian Russia, next month. The ceremony is an expression of gratitude for help which the United States has extended to Armenia through the Near East Relief during the past few years.

Pruning of orchards in Oregon can be started as soon as the leaves are off, says C. E. Schuster, assistant horticulturist for the experiment station. It is a good plan to prune walnuts and cherries before the first of the year, as they have a tendency to bleed. The bleeding may cause no particular damage, but its appearance strikes most people as harmful.

Drainage work of the O.A.C. experiment station showed need for a tool which could be operated by horse power and which would not require a man in the ditch for its operation. Such a tool has been invented by Mr. Percy Purvis of Vale, and is known as the "Purvis sluicer." This machine is cylindrical in shape, and its cutting power is derived from cylinder teeth which protrude at intervals from the entire exterior area. In operation, the machine is dragged up and down the ditch lengthwise. The machine is made entirely of iron and can be constructed any good blacksmith. It costs about $25.

The winter season is the opportune time for getting dryers into shape for the coming season, says E. H. Wiegand, horticulturist for the experiment station. All parts are inspected, cleaned, and overhauled. Then the dryer is gone over entirely with a hot 1 per cent lye solution to eliminate sugars and to prevent mold from forming in the dryer.

Proper circulation of air is necessary to continued good health of the flock in the winter season. Fowls are susceptible to colds at this season, so draughts are to be avoided. The Oregon experiment station secures ventilation by leaving the front of the house open. Draughts are avoided by keeping all windows and other openings closed.

ACHESON SURVEYS AMERICAN OPERATIONS

BARCLAY ACHESON

Barclay Acheson, well-known to many in Oregon and Washington because of years of residence in Chehalis, South Bend and Portland, called from New York on November 5th, to continue his work as Director of Overseas Operations for the Near East Relief. Acheson has recently spent more than a year in the Near East, making careful survey of the different fields where American charity is caring for more than 50,000 children.

Speaking before clubs of Portland, Seattle and Tacoma business men, Acheson declared that the Near East Relief is coming into a new phase of work. "Except for Syria and Greece, there is little more than the normal amount of suffering in the Near East," he said. "It is true that the situation in those camps is desperate, and there are thousands of children there who will perish this winter simply because there are some folks in America who are getting tired of giving. Anyone who has ever seen the miracles that I have seen—homeless and hopeless, ragged children turned into happy, confident, healthy children—would never talk about being tired of giving."

"During the past year we saved 16,000 children from going blind and we trained hundreds of girls to go out as nurses to save the sight of other thousands of children, as well as to raise the health standards everywhere they go."

"Boys trained in modern methods of agriculture by Sam Newman of Seattle and Leonard Hartill of Corvallis, are revolutionizing the ideas of farmers who are securing twice their former crops by the use of these modern methods."

"Sometimes people say to me, 'Why don't these people do something for themselves?' And I wonder if they mean the children, some of whom begin as early as eight to help earn their own way."

"The Near East Relief is not giving aid to adult refugees except in the distribution of old clothing. And last year we gave help to 500,000 in this way. Our program is purely one of child-care, and as soon as our children are able to support themselves, our work will be finished. But these are children, mostly orphans, strangers in a strange land, with no claim whatever upon the governments who have given them a place to live."

Acheson declared that the Greek government is doing more to aid the refugees than all the relief agencies combined, and is spending more on them than on all governmental agencies combined.
