Issued Even, Thursday at Turner, Marion County, Oregon

CURE FOR THE FOOLS

The above is the heading of an editorial in the Klamath News and reprinted in the Oregon Journal of September 5. The editor carries the idea that it is impossible cure reckless drivers by fines or imprisonment. He is right. The reckless driver does not care for a fine of five or ten dollars. He will pay his fine and continue to be a menace to the motoring public. Our prison is overcrowded now and why burden the public with added expense of caring for this class. He has decided that there is only one way to cure this class of fools and that is to take away their license. He says: 'There is only one cure for the fools who drive recklessly along our highways, and that cure is to take their driver's license away from them and not permit them to touch a steering wheel again.'

He carries the idea that there is no way to reform this class of driver: 'There is no way to reform such chumps as this driver. He is hopeless and the sooner society takes away from him the dangerous weapon known as an automobile, the sooner will society be safe.'

The writer of the article carries the idea that if the licenses were taken away from this class of driver he would be blacklisted in the different states and it would be impossible for him to get a license in any state.

He asks the following question: 'Where is there a legislator who will father such a law.'

TOW CAR DRIVER HAS CLOSE CALL While Mearl Enslay of this city, driving a Chevrolet touring, was towing in a track driven by B. Scouff of Marion, the tow-rope suddenly snapping around the hub of the truck caused the car driven by young Enslay to become unmanageable, and swerve into a ten foot ditch near the watering trough north of Turner, overturning the car but luckily resulting in no injuries to either of the boys. The car was undamaged save for a bent front fender. The shock rendered Enslay unconscious momentarily but he regained his consciousness when Scouff called asking if he was hurt. Presence of mind in Enslay in hugging close to the steering wheel undoubtedly saved him some bad bruises in the crash. In trying to extricate himself he found in some manner one foot had gotten underneath the floorboard, but other than a few minor skin abrasions he was unhurt. Mearl Enslay is a well known athlete of the local Turner high school, having made letters in football, basketball, and baseball last year.

THE FARMER'S BEST WAY OUT Dean Russell of Wisconsin College of Agriculture says: 'Two things have hit the farmer hard in the same things have hit business. They are increase in cost of production and decline in prices which latter has been more drastic in farm products than manufactured products. The farmer's political friends say salvation can be found through legislation. Our legislative doctors propose price control. The difficulty with this is price control always means price elevation which always produces expansion in production and if this occurs without expansion in consumption you have inevitable decline in prices. The remedy works to produce the very opposite result from that intended. Another legislative panacea would make it easier to borrow, as if running into debt was the solution of the difficulty. There are farmers who wish it had not been quite so easy to borrow because the inevitable day comes when they have to pay principal and interest. The third legislative remedy would make easier the pathway for cooperative endeavor. All you have to do is to wave the magic wand 'Cooperation' and all the farmer's difficulties will immediately disappear. I wonder if there is any government that can make people cooperate. The success of cooperative effort will be in organization from the bottom up rather than from the top down and it will take a decade or two for the results to be felt. The farmers have at hand a remedy that can be utilized immediately with the definite knowledge that it will secure far better results if they will take a leaf out of present day business methods they will have relief in agriculture they will not have to wait for. Business has suffered the same as the farmer, yet business came through in a way that is far ahead of the farmer. This has been thought about through industrial efficiency, through improvement of methods. They have increased labor output per unit to the degree the costs of production have actually been reduced by better methods of carrying on work. Industrial enterprises on a large scale are spending millions on research. In ten years automobile output per worker has increased 172 per cent, tires 211 per cent, oil 83 per cent, cement 61 per cent. Compare that with others. The packers have increased 67 27 per cent, sugar refining 23 per cent, boots and shoes only 6 per cent. There has been an increase in agriculture since 1913 of 20 per cent. It is doubtful that business has any such opportunity as exists in agriculture to reduce cost of production through improved methods. Take corn— Iowa shows a variation in cost of production from fifteen cents to seventy-five cents a bushel. In Illinois the cost of producing corn on 80 acre fields was reduced from fifty two cents to twenty cents a bushel. The manufacturer who had it within his power to reduce production costs from fifty-two to thirty cents per unit would be tickled to death with the opportunity of beating competition under these conditions. The way out for the farmer is (1) to become a business man, (2) to adopt business methods, to adapt himself to the same kind of conditions and be as efficiently mobile as is our manufacturer or our business man in the ordinary channels of his trade, (3) to rely less upon political promises and more upon individual initiative, (4) to work toward cooperative endeavor but in the meanwhile not to wait for cooperative endeavor to solve all of these problems because individually he can do something at the present time.'
