POWER COMPANIES AND COMMERCIAL STREAMS (Continued from last week.)

Commercial Fishing

Last week we discussed the value of the Oregon streams as a recreational asset both financially and as an advertising feature. This week we want to discuss their value as a propagation ground for commercial fish. It is a well known fact that the salmon, the great commercial fish of the North Pacific coast, run up these streams to the very headwaters of the small tributaries to spawn. The argument may be put forward, and it has been by some, that the hatcheries that collect the eggs from the fishing grounds, take the place of the natural spawning ground. Anyone who lives along the tributaries of the Santiam River knows that the different varieties of salmon run up these streams every year to the natural spawning grounds, by the thousands, every year. Cut off these fish from natural spawning and you have shortened the annual income of the great fishing industry many thousands of dollars. The great fishing industry is one of the great assets of the state of Oregon. The question to decide at the polls, this fall, is whether we are going to open these streams to the power companies of the state of California to erect their great dams and power plants to generate electricity from Oregon streams to be fed back into California, to the detriment of our own state financially, by blocking these streams to the free movement of fish, and spoiling their recreational advantages. We will end our discussion next week by discussing the influence behind these bills.

SUMMONS IN FORECLOSURE OF DELINQUENT TAX CERTIFICATE

In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, for Marion County. Case No. 19716.

Mrs. Wm. Porter, plaintiff, vs. Henry C. Bognyaska, defendant.

To Henry C. Bognyaska, the above named defendant.

In the name of the State of Oregon:

You are hereby notified that Mrs. Wm. Today every family—poor or rich—may have as many servants as needed, and at a cost of but a fraction of the family budget. This new help is electrical. You don't have to advertise for it or order it in advance. It is there, day and night, always ready to do your bidding—never tiring—never taking an afternoon off—never complaining. Back of this instantaneous dependable service is a company supplying the same help to thousands of other homes; which lights many cities and towns; runs factories and trains—and does it all as part of the day's work. In spite of its constantly increasing usefulness and availability, the cost of this service has steadily decreased, while all other costs have increased. Investment Department 237 N.
