

THE TURNER TRIBUNE

Turner, Oregon, Thursday AUG. 1, 1929

F. H. Ranulry, Editor

Issued Every Thursday at Turner, Marion County, Oregon

SUBSCRIPTION $1.25 PER YEAR. Entered at the Postoffice at Turner, Oregon, as second-class matter, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

"I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States and the country for which it stands. One nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Volunteer Cossacks

One of the reasons cossackism flourishes as it does among petty officialdom is that these officials are ogged on by a few hundred thousand volunteer cossacks, whose entire lives seem to be wrapped up in the regulation of their neighbors.

Illustrative of this frame of mind is a letter written to newspapers by Mrs. Pratt Jurgens. Here it is: I am happy to say I am doing my part to help reform this sin-ridden world. I am a member of the Anti-Saloon League, the Anti-Light Wines and Beer League, the Anti-Cigarette League, the Anti-Tobacco League, the Anti-Nudity-in-Art League, the Anti-Poolroom League and the Anti-Sunday Amusement League.

Mrs. Jurgens seems to hold some sort of "anti" record. She must spend a good deal of her time hunting up new leagues to join. Her basic mistake—and it is the mistake of a good many similar people—is that she believes this to be a "sin-ridden world. From this basis she invents the idea that it is her mission to reform it.

Even if Mrs. Jurgens succeeds in abolishing beer and wine, it is people smoking, gets rid of all the "nudity in art," closes all the poolrooms and shuts up all the movies, parks and picnic grounds on Sundays—what good will she have accomplished? What does she and her kind purpose people shall do, instead?

Anyone who wants to make the world better—and that includes nearly all of us—should first discover good things of the world and then introduce the rest of us to them.

Being anti-everything never got anyone anywhere. It never will. Portland Daily News.

Out Where The West Never Changes

Some of the tourists from the east this summer are expressing disappointment over the lack of cowboys, rattlesnakes, stage coaches, pistol battles and rampaging Indians in our fair [and warmer] city.

The general eastern idea of the west is a land of deserts, intersected by gulches in which red-shirted miners pan dizzily for gold, while feathered braves take potshots at them from the hills around. Every 20 minutes a troupe of wild cowboys gallops by, carrying "Roll on, Little Doggies, roll on!"

And seal in your cabin door stands Bessie, the Prairie Flower, in her gingham gown, robbing while the eastern schoolmarm vamps Broncho Ned, the best cow-buster on the old Chisholm trail.

We once showed a Pittsburg man a picture of the main stem in this city. He looked at it for a minute.

"Heck!" he said, "you've got paving, huh?" "Oh, yeah," we said, "and electric lights, telephone, and old Doc Holliday's thinking of importing one of these automobiles if he can get a jerkline outfit to snake it over the Rockies for him."

What the west ought to do, instead of blushing at eastern conceptions of itself, is give the east what it wants and enlist the services of citizens to impersonate the old heroes of the frontier, around the depot.

When that happens we want the pleasure of shooting the spatts off a New York dude. Durn! if we ain't wanted to do that for years—and here's a vantage! Portland Daily News

Air Transportation Growing

The airplane is the first mode of transportation to recognize no physical or geographical barrier to its ultimate use.

The foundation of aviation has been laid through years of hazardous experimenting. Some $500,000,000 has gone into its various branches during the last two years.

It is probably necessary to look forward only a few years to see airplane post offices, with the mail picked up, sorted and discharged in much the same fashion as is now done by railroads; transcontinental services in aircraft provided with comfortable sleeping accommodations; radio-telephone communication for passengers as well as crew, and a service so comprehensive that practically every important industrial center in the United States will be identified with this newest agency of freight and passenger transportation.

On the Pacific Coast, the Pacific Air Transport carries mail and passengers north and south from Seattle to Los Angeles, a distance of 1,100 miles, the second longest air mail line in the country. During May this company flew every mile on time and new schedules recently inaugurated shorten the trip north by one hour and 45 minutes and the trip south by one hour and 15 minutes. Southbound planes arrive in Los Angeles in time to make night train connections for Phoenix, El Paso, San Antonio, Dallas and Southwest points, effecting a saving of 12 to 24 hours. Fares have also been reduced on an average of 35 per cent.

Travel by air is no longer considered a gamble with death. As we become better educated to its advantages, schedules will be improved and rates will continue to go down.

By C. F. Redlich, the successful expert says:

The "Perfect Retention Shield" holds the rupture perfectly, no matter what position the body assumes, or how heavy a weight you lift. They give instant relief, contract the opening in a remarkably short time and strengthen the weak tissues (the real cause of rupture) so that they frequently recover their previous natural retaining power, needing no further outside support. Stomach trouble, backache and constipation often caused by rupture promptly disappear.

Truly remarkable and prompt results have been obtained not only with recent but also with long neglected ones. Ingenious, recently perfected devices are now holding ruptures firmly which heretofore never had been retained.

No elastic belts nor filthy legstraps are used. I guarantee the durability of my absolutely sweat and moisture proof, sanitary appliances.

75% of ruptured children recover completely through expert mechanical treatment according to statistics. Do not waste your money on widely advertised mail order contraptions. You cannot fit yourself.

In Address to Graduates of University of Oregon

This article is the record of a series of six which will be published in this paper.

The address was "Social Science and Current Progress," which the speaker is a part of the address given before the graduating class of the University of Oregon at the annual commencement this year.

By FRANK O. LOWDEN

Former Governor of Illinois

The modern university is now making its full contribution to the continuous achievements of the material sciences. Have the so-called social sciences, however, kept pace with their material sisters in the progress of the age? It was but "natural" in the development of the material sciences that the method which had transformed the material sciences should be largely delayed. The social sciences deal so largely with intangible forces involving human nature, that it was more difficult in these sciences to apply the method of observing facts, of applying the rule of trial and error, than in the material sciences.

Despite man's triumphs over them in matter, as distinguished authority as Professor Fetter, of Princeton, recently said:

"Throughout the nineteenth century the civilized nations, like children with new-found toys, rejoiced in each new wonder of material progress. Suddenly we were made to realize how far material progress had outstripped spiritual growth.

"Race, biological quality, human psychology are the foundations and structures on which any civilization is built. Are these present foundations strong enough to stand the increasing pressure of the enormous superstructure of our material achievements? Many men are asking whether indeed civilization has not already begun its descent into the twilight of the gods. There is so no longer doubt in any thoughtful mind that the danger that threatens the world can be averted only by drafting all the powers of science, and all the finer possibilities of human nature, into the service of a new statesmanship."

Why this note of despondency repeated with ominous frequency from time to time? Is it not because these sciences that have had to do with human relationships have not kept pace with the mere material sciences?

The scientists tell us that the first notable progress upward began when man became a social animal. So long as he was not conscious of being a member of a society, however primitive, progress was impossible to him. It was only when social consciousness came to him that he began his upward climb to the heights upon which he stands today.

Perhaps in this we find the clue to a higher civilization than any we have yet attained. Just as the material sciences have vastly improved the condition of mankind, so the social sciences seem now to have entered upon a new career of usefulness to the world.

It was in the recognizing of the possibilities of the material sciences that the social sciences received their greatest impetus. I quote from that great work called "The Rise of American Civilization," by Beard:

"In the midst of the intellectual activities which surged up with increasing power as the eighteenth century advanced was formulated the most dynamic social theory ever shaped in the history of thought—the idea of progress or the continual improvement in the lot of mankind on this earth by the attainment of knowledge in the application of the material world to the requirements of human welfare."

This concept was unknown to the ancients. It was unknown in medieval times. For the first time in history, the idea dawned upon men's minds that there might be continual progress. An implication of this concept was that such progress should go so far as to embrace all mankind. It was the most powerful impulse that had been set in motion against the idea of the use of society of classes or of slave and free. From its impulse there came largely the revolution in America and the revolution in France. It inspired the struggle toward democracy. It has become the underlying and still but half recognized principle of the social sciences. It is the absolute condition upon which rests the perpetuity of the modern state. The happiness and well-being of the average man and woman must be steadily advanced if our civilization is to endure. The economist may explain, the statesman may execute, our failure to accomplish this, but the fact remains that no government can endure if the well-being of the man and woman and children under its government is not continuously improved.

And why should we despair of the indefinite progress of the human race? We are told by the scientists that man has been upon the earth for at least fifteen hundred thousand years before he learned to make the cradest instrument of stone. And that eight or nine million years ago, he had a half million years to invent his first crude tool. And only eight thousand years from that primitive invention to the marvels of today!

The social sciences are beginning to apply the same method which has
