

After all, a prison is not maintained as a place of rest, recreation and recuperation.

Who can remember the old-fashioned dude, of whom it was said, "Every move a picture?"

Nature is still triumphant. No girl looks as weirdly frank in person as in the fashion pictures.

The biggest fourflusher around town claims it takes two of the new small sized bills to light a cigar.

Back home when you wanted suspenders, you just walked into a store and asked for "suspenders."

We Americans look upon the orientals with pity and they gaze on us with contempt, and so honors are even.

"A western girl has made a fashionable dress out of shavings from the sawmill." Er—and about the spintners?

"Swiss cheese now yielding to scientists," says a headline. We never knew anyone else to get the better of it.

Overheard on the bus: "Did you spend the usual two weeks' vacation at home?" "Uh huh—a very usual two weeks."

An interesting sight we haven't encountered in 15 years at least is a runaway team hitched to a watermelon wagon.

"Why do you buy more shoes, at this time? You have 11 pairs in the closet." "I know, but I need the box for a picnic lunch."

It is saddening to think that in a little while we shall begin to miss the old-fashioned dollar bills, and the new smaller ones, too.

A recipe of the week calls for candied carrots, on the theory, perhaps, that the bitterest pill can be swallowed if it is sugar-coated.

One who lives in a "house by the side of the road" these days is likely to find the deep tracks of strange automobiles in his front lawn.

Possibly the most notable instance of good judgment during the heated term has been the Swedish flyers' inability to get out of Iceland.

What profiteth a man to break out of a New York prison, where he has been seeing Broadway shows for nothing, and pay $11 for a seat?

Another thing we have always felt to be wildly exaggerated is the importance of the matter marked in a "Marked Copy," after it arrives.

"The fall hat will be lighter this year than last," says a well known authority on male styles. It should, if the dry cleaner knows his business.

In view of our inability to do anything about the weather, perhaps the next best thing is to do something to the chump who's always reminding us of it.

We wouldn't call the name of Salmon P. Chase a household word exactly. And certainly we wouldn't call his face on the new $10,000 bill a household face.

Perhaps the most puzzling thing about Tibet, called the Land of Mystery in a new book title, is how each new explorer who manages to get into the place is the first.

A Chicagoan, robbed of his suit of clothes by footpads, dashed into an alley and wrapped himself with a sport extra. This is a way, of course, of getting into the papers.

Considering the manner in which the reducing fad has swept through women's wardrobes, father wonders how mother and the girls still manage to require so much luggage for vacation tours.

Heard on the bus: "The other night our favorite wife accused the Young Hopeful of using some of her new sun-tan powder, but investigation developed that he had only failed to wash his neck."

An eminent dermatologist says whiskers grow just as fast in cold weather as in hot. This no doubt accounts for the many long beards among Eskimos.

A police force in South America has nipped a plot to injure the United States. That's more than some police forces in the United States are doing.

"What is woman's place?" asks a correspondent. As a result of extended observation, we are able to inform him that it is any place she happens to be in, while she's there.

The scientific preparation paradi-chlorobenzene is said to be very destructive to moths. A good plan is to write the name on a piece of paper and place it in your pocket; then the moth will see it and laugh himself to death.
