Russians Store Wheat in Churches

While the saints in this Russian church at Petrovsky look down benignly, peasants bring in their wheat crop. Have it duly recorded by a commissar and then take it to the huge mound of wheat in the nave. So great is the crop this year that ordinary means of storing it have been exhausted. Officials were forced to use churches.

New Bridge Links Indiana and Kentucky

The new Madison-Milton bridge, costing $1,800,000, which shortens the distance between Indianapolis and Frankfort, the capital cities of Indiana and Kentucky, by forty miles. It also opens a new short route from Chicago and the Northwest to Florida and the South coast. The bridge spans the Ohio river between Madison, Ind., and Milton Ky.

Princess Eagle Eye Is Crowned

Design for Chicago War Memorial

Here is the prize winning design for the war memorial which Chicago will erect on an artificial island off the lake front. It is the work of Roger Bailey and Eric Gugler, architects of New York.

"WELCOME, STRANGER"

The city of Oakland, Calif., has installed a novelty for the benefit of strangers. At the corners of the principal streets, chained to posts, are city directories—books with steel leaves on which are maps and directions to points of interest.

RECORD FOR GREENLEAF

A world's record was established in the pocket billiard tourney held at Detroit when Ralph Greenleaf scored 125 points in the second inning of the game against Frank Taberski.

Early Town Clock

The first tower clock in the United States, which was for the general benefit of the townspeople, was the one, according to N. Hudson Moore, in the church at Ipswich, Mass. The new meeting house was built in 1699 and in 1704 the clock and dial were added.

A Few Little Smiles

SO COOL HE FORGOT

A few minutes after an alarm of fire was given in a hotel, one of the guests joined the group that was watching the fire, and chafed them on their apparent excitement. "There was nothing to be excited about," he said. "I took my time about dressing, lighted a cigarette, didn't like the knot in my necktie, so tied it over again—that's how cool I was."

"Fine," one of his friends remarked. "But why didn't you put on your pants?"

No "Excuse It, Please"

"Yes, lady, getting the wrong number got me here," said prisoner No. 71123.

"Dear, dear!" exclaimed the old lady visitor. "I suppose you used such profane language the telephone company complained."

"No," replied the prisoner; "you see, the officers found I had three wives."

NOT NECESSARILY BETTER

First Girlie—You say you like him because he's a better man?
Second Girlie—No—a petter man.

Practical Economies

A fortune great may grow. And yet, before he's through with it, A man may scarcely know Precisely what to do with it.

Cold Comfort

Gerald—You don't seem pleased when I suggest you have a lovely disposition.
Clarice—I'm not. Telling a girl she has a lovely disposition is usually an apology for not being able to say she is either good-looking or interesting.

Can Depend on One Nation

"This nation cannot be trusted to support and defend liberty?"
"No; the only nation that can be depended upon to do that is indignation."

A Trick of the Trade

The Salesman—These imported breakfast robes don't go very well.
The Manager—Advertise 'em next week as ladies' smoking jackets; that'll move 'em.

SHIPPED WEST

"Prehistoric oysters were found in the Potomac river recently."
"Yes, I think I ate some of them in a restaurant the other day."

But Today's Nights

In days of old when knights were bold Politeness held its reign. Men of that tribe would not describe Their lady as a "jane."

She Meant Well

Mrs. B. (writing to beloved traveler husband)—Dearest, day and night my thoughts are with you always. Sleeping, I dream of you; waking in the morning and seeing your bathrobe hanging on the bed post, I wish it were you.

The Unexpected Answer

Fed-up Motorist (tinkering with old car)—First car you ever saw, I suppose?
Ruralist—Noa, sur, but it's very much lolke it.

Modernism

"Alas" sighed the disappointed sultan. "The girl of my dreams has married another and all hope of winning her is gone."
"Cheer up," advised his best friend "she'll probably be back in circula-tion again by this time next year."

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

No Need to Be Ashamed

THE other day a health officer tacked up a scarlet-fever sign on a man's house. When night came the owner tore it down. The next evening he paid a fine of fifty dollars and costs for interfering with a health law!

It seems that this particular householder was ashamed of the sign and somehow concluded that he was personally discredited for having it there—a silly notion, of course.

Disease is no respecter of persons. Like rain, it falls upon the good and the bad, the rich and the poor, the wise and the foolish. Therefore, unless one has thoughtlessly or deliberately done something to direct illness to one's self or others, there is certainly nothing about which to blush. In other words, it may be hard luck to have a communicable disease in one's home, but it most emphatically is not a crime.

Epidemics are serious, costly and deadly things. Quarantine is designed to limit the spread of contagion and usually satisfactorily fulfills its purpose. In fact, it is the most successful public health weapon that can be employed when a communicable disease asserts itself.

It would be foolish to say that this control method is not a decided inconvenience to the family involved. But the law of the greatest good to the greatest number must always prevail. Consequently, irrespective of temporary inconvenience or desire, under no circumstances "crash" a quarantine sign. This applies equally to the "outs," as well as to the "ins."

Vibrating for Health

IT WAS naturally to be expected that, in this being an electrical age, mechanical exercisers would eventually make their appearance. And so it has come to pass that electricity, in the form of vibrating machines, are now literally taking the heart out of exercise.

The value of such a device to those whose heart action is impaired unquestionably is a real one, all other things being equal. And for many lazy and extra stout people who absolutely refuse to take their exercise by way of physical exertion, it will also be of some benefit.

However, generally speaking, this worthy machine, like every other treatment agency, must be handled with common sense. It is quite conceivable, for example, that a person suffering from a sub-acute case of appendicitis would not be very much helped by having the abdomen thus mechanically massaged. Indeed, there may be a number of slumbering conditions which would be better off without the use of such a machine.

Then, too, there is a tendency to overdo the thing in the desire to massage off fat; and in this way deliberately disregard the sensible operating rules set down by the manufacturers of these contrivances.

It perhaps might be a wise procedure, therefore, to use the vibrator only after the physician advises that your physical condition will be benefited by so doing.

Present-day civilization is not notable for its exercise producing tendencies, which often blinds many to the very fundamental fact that the human system was constructed on the basis of sweat-producing work and a real use of the body muscles. And frankly, nothing has ever been, or will be, devised that can fully and entirely be substituted satisfactorily for it.

If well, and desiring to do so, use a vibrator. But don't forget that your body needs the good old-fashioned garden variety combination of daily fresh air and actual exercise also. If sick, or near sick, vibrate for health only under a physician's order.

In any event, keep the vibrators in their proper place by not overindulging in their use. Treat them with respect and they will respect you. Vibrate sensibly.

Great Estates Linked With Scottish History

One of the oldest and most historic estates in Scotland, is Gadhgirth, in Ayrshire, six miles from Ayr. For centuries it was the home of the Chalmers, great chamberlains of Scotland, from whom Doctor Chalmers, the famous divine, is said to have claimed descent. From an account written by the sheriff of Ayr in 1259, "the farthing lands of Gadhgirth formed part of the royal domains" or "King's Kyle," and were held by the Chalmers family from possibly the Twelfth century. According to the authority of Robertson the historian, Reginald De Camera had a charter of the lands after the battle of Bannockburn from Robert the Bruce, although this does not, however, appear among the published charters of that monarch's reign. The first castle was a place of great strength and jutted out into the River Ayr, while in the second, which occupied the same site as the present mansion house. John Knox dispensed the sacrament, and Queen Mary of Scots spent a night there when fleeing after the battle of Langside. The estate extends to close on 400 acres, and includes three farms.

Apostle's Creed?

This is the name of a church creed, supposed to be an epitome of the Scriptural doctrine taught by the apostles. It was introduced in the Latin church in the Eleventh century, but a somewhat similar formula dates back to the Second century.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Common Artistic Error in Depicting New Moon

Artists accustomed to inserting a new moon in a picture in the most artistic position often transgress the laws of nature, as the horns of the crescent moon must always point in a definite direction, depending primarily on the latitude of the observer.

In the north temperate zone the new moon as seen just after sunset always points upward and to the left. In this latitude the sun circles to the south and, as it approaches the western horizon descends obliquely from left to right. The new moon, following the sun, takes approximately the same course, and since the horns always point away from the sun, they turn upward and to the left.

In the southern part of the earth the reverse is true, while in the tropics the horns point almost directly upward. The position of the old moon as it rises in the morning is the reverse of that of the new moon as viewed from the same latitude.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Thankful

James, living in Irvington, had a party on his sixth birthday, which came the day before Thanksgiving, and twelve children were his guests, seated around the table. There seemed to be nothing worth talking about, they were so busy eating, so one of the grownups present asked them to tell what they were thankful for. In turn they said they were thankful for a lot of things.

One little girl said she was thankful there is a Santa Claus, and a five-year-old boy said: "I'm thankful I'm not a turkey."—Indianapolis News.

Cautious Motorist

There is a woman who lives in a Pittsburgh (Pa.) suburb who takes no chances of being sued by any one who might be injured while riding with her in her automobile. The woman has had form slips prepared and every one—even her closest friends—must sign one of these slips each time before starting out in the car. The forms are so worded that if any guest occupant of the car sustains injuries, the woman is absolved from all blame.

Married Woman's Name

Actually there is no federal nor, so far as we can ascertain, state law which arbitrarily compels a woman to bear her husband's surname unless she wishes to do so. Recently the United States controller issued an order that married women in the government employ should sign their husband's surname when signing the pay roll.—Washington Star.
