THE "OLD-FASHIONED" HOME

Reference to the "old-fashioned" home of a generation or two ago seldom fails to evoke a smile of derisive amusement among the sophisticated youth of today. That is, when it is not made the object of downright disdainful criticism.

There seems to be a "modernistic" trend toward the disparagement of the "good old days" to which our elders look back with a sort of loving regret which, while it may be futile and pathetic, is nevertheless entitled to respect. On the other hand, there is also a tendency on the part of many of the older generation to harp unduly on the virtues of those by-gone times, and to lament their seemingly complete absence in the social structure of today. Both cases evidence a lack of that sympathetic understanding without which our judgment of others must necessarily be faulty, indeed. To idealize the past, while condemning the present, would be just as foolish and useless as ridiculing the old while extolling the modern.

In speaking of the "old-fashioned" American home, there comes to the writer's mind a picture of an old-fashioned house (one of many, many thousands) roomy and built to last. The first thing to greet the eyes, on entering, would be a "Welcome Stranger," or a "God Bless Our Home," or some other equally friendly motto on the wall. The furniture and furnishings throughout would be homely, but substantial and comfortable. In one corner of the large, combination kitchen, dining, living-room there stands a roomy rocker which is supposed to be exclusively mother's, but is usually pre-empted by father—undisputed "head of the house," and universally respected as such.

In the "parlor," the ubiquitous horseshair sofa, with chairs to match, impart an air of austere respectability to the one space traditionally (and almost religiously) reserved for "company." A wondrously carved black walnut table occupies a proud position in the exact center of a gay, flower-embellished, Brussels rug. On its immaculate marble top reposes the family Bible, with its unerring record of births and deaths. Or, maybe it would be the family photograph "album," bulging with the likeness and memorabilia of present and bygone generations.

Over there, in the corner by the window, the inevitable four or five storied "what not" displays a truly marvelous collection of relics and souvenirs gathered from the four corners of the earth by various members of the household. Few of them possess any intrinsic value, but each and everyone of them is priceless in the memories it helps to preserve, and the recollections it revives.

Freedom of the Press

The State of Minnesota has what is commonly known as the Newspaper Gag Law, which was brought into force in 1927 when the Saturday Press, of Minneapolis, was silenced by court injunction. This action was taken by a county attorney whom the newspaper criticized, which criticism was, no doubt, needed. In order to appease his injured feelings he invoked this law and silenced the paper and the courts upheld the injunction. Is this freedom of the press? If the newspaper is not allowed to criticize public officials who are working for their own selfish interests and against the best interests of the citizenry at large, how can these wrongs be brought to light?

Colonel Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, backed by the leading publishers of America are taking the case to the supreme court in an effort to find out whether the privileges of the press can be abrogated by a one sided law. They are standing for the same principles that were fought for by Socrates 22 centuries ago and Milton three centuries ago, and the same principles that were written into our constitution. "We have no wish to foster libelous publications," said Colonel McCormick. "The general libel laws can be invoked against those if the charges are proven. Our fight is against allowing the truth to be suppressed, and newspapers ruled out of existence, by a single judge, without a jury trial."

The "gag law" was introduced by a legislator from the iron range country in Northern Minnesota in 1925 to silence an editor in his constituency who had attacked him, but the editor died before action could be taken. The county attorney found it ready made and put it to his own selfish use. It is to be hoped that Colonel McCormick's appeal will be successful.

Governors Plenty

Indications that there will be nine in the race for governor at spring primaries. The republicans will have six and probably more before the campaign is over. So far there are four who have announced themselves as candidates for governor. They are Senator Harry L. Corbett, Governor Norblad, Charles Hall of Potential democratic candidates are Ex-governor Walter M. Pierce, Bert E. Haney, ex-member of the shipping board, Elton Watkins, Senator Baily from Lane county, Major-General C. H. Martin and Ashley Dickson, ex-circuit judge. Had it not been for the death of Governor Patterson there would not have been so many hats sailed into thering. But now it is a free for all race. With the lineup as it is it appears that Chas Hall, of Coos county is probably the strongest man on the list. Checking over the list of candidates it is apparent there will be a contest that will warm the cockles of the hearts of the old guard politicians. Let us not forget the interests of the state of Oregon in the heat of campaign. Study the man and decide which one will do the most in the interests of the state at large and vote for that man. The democrats also have some good timber in the race. Perhaps Ex Governor Pierce and Bert Haney are the two strongest. They are both men who have the best interest of the state at heart. It is going to be up to the voter to do some hard thinking before going to vote on election day.

Turner Electric Light and Power Company Reduce Rates

December -- 1929

Mr. I. L. Robertson Turner, Oregon

Dear Mr. Robertson:

We have finally completed the analysis of the effect upon our revenue of applying Portland Electric Power Company rates to our Turner accounts, and find that during the past twelve (12) months we would have received $552.08 less at the Portland Electric Light & Power Company rates.

We have a heavy investment in the 11,000 volt line which we extended to supply Turner with service from our Portland Electric Power Company system, in addition to the investment in the local distributing system at Turner.

Therefore, the higher rates of the Turner Electric Light & Power Company are necessary to produce a reasonable return on the investment on the basis of the amount of electricity being used at present.

However, it is our hope that if Portland Electric Power Company rates are applied to Turner accounts that people will use enough more electricity to cause our revenues to be no less than they have been in the past and thereby continue to justify the investment we have made in the Turner distribution system and the 11,000 volt transmission line which was extended to Turner.

Therefore, in response to the petition presented by yourself and other citizens of Turner, we have decided to apply the Portland Electric Power Company rates to our Turner customers beginning with January 1st, 1930.

We hope that our progressive policy in this matter will be appreciated and that people will make more use of our electric service and thereby enjoy the benefits and economies to be derived therefrom.

We wish to assure the people of Turner that we are ready and willing at all times to render the best service possible at the lowest cost consistent with sound business practices.

It at any time of the citizens of Turner feel that we are not doing this, we will be very pleased to have them so advise us and give us their friendly criticism so that we may remedy the defect in our service, if any, or have the opportunity of explaining the cause of the apparent deficiency in our service.

Yours truly,

W. M. Hamilton President
