"PEE WEE" GOLF TO BE ON THE PROGRAM AT STATE FAIR

Horses from the finest stables in the west are expected to arrive here next week for last-minute training before the opening of the Oregon State Fair program on Monday, September 22.

Nearly 80 entrants are on the list for the stake and class harness races, while more than 100 running horses probably will register here for the special events in which prizes will aggregate $17,500, according to Mrs. Ella S. Wilson, secretary of the state fair board.

Horse barns have been put into first class shape, with everything in readiness for the large influx of championship animals ever entered in an Oregon exposition, she declared today.

Every division of the fair is assured a marked gain in quantity and quality of exhibits, according to members of the state fair board, with insufficient display space now the only problem confronting final plans for the 69th annual event.

Concession and exhibit space already is leased to capacity, while late applicants probably will have difficulty in obtaining proper quarters for their displays, it was declared today.

Even "Pee-wee golf," condemned by scores and played by thousands, has invaded the realm of amusements, and at least one course and an additional trick-shot device will have a place on the entertainment program.

Fifteen counties have contracted for individual displays, with booths already being arranged in the rapidly filling agricultural building, it was announced today.

Counties to be represented include Clackamas, Columbia, Coos, Douglas, Jackson, Josephine, Lane, Linn, Malheur, Marion, Polk, Tillamook, Wasco, Washington and Yamhill.

Thirty-five industrial firms in Oregon, Washington and California also are to place exhibits in the agricultural building, in addition to displays by the Oregon Cooperative Wool Growers association and by the Canadian government, entry lists show.

Buildings have been thoroughly cleaned and aired, grounds have the appearance of a well-kept park, and the entire machinery of the fair organization is humming merrily in preparation for the event here September 22 to 28, Mrs. Wilson declared today.

JUSTICE MCBRIDE PASSES AT HIS HOME IN SALEM

Grand Old Man and Dean of Legal Profession in Oregon Dies at Age of Eighty-two Years.

Thomas Allen McBride, senior member of the Oregon supreme court and dean of the legal profession in Oregon in point of years of continuous service, died at his home in Salem, 1065 South Liberty street, at 11:45 o'clock Tuesday night. He was 82 years old.

Justice McBride had been ill of cerebral embolism for two weeks following his return from a vacation at Foley Hot Springs, and his condition had been considered critical for the past ten days. He was conscious up to sometime Monday.

Present at the home at the time of his death were Mrs. McBride, the justice's son, George of Portland, and daughter, Mrs. Mae Newton of Deer Island, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Laura Baxter of Berkeley.

Justice McBride was a pioneer of the frontier days and came of one of Oregon's most prominent families. The family located in Oregon more than 80 years ago, and its members were closely associated with the progress and upbuilding of the state. Justice McBride had the distinction of being the oldest lawyer in Oregon with relation to years of continuous service.

Justice McBride was born in Yamhill county, Oregon, November 15, 1847. His parents were James and Mahala (Miller) McBride, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Missouri. On his father side, Justice McBride's ancestors came from the north of Ireland to America in about the year 1760, James McBride, great grandfather of the judge, served in the Revolutionary war as a lieutenant in the Virginia regulars. His wife was an aunt of President Andrew Jackson. Their son, a native of Tennessee, was a minister, and assisted Alexander Campbell and Barton W. Stone in the organization of the Christian church.

Carl Booth and wife of Summit Hill enjoyed a trip over the Mt. Hood loop with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. McClelland of Salem. G. F. Booth and wife stayed at their farm while they were away.

DIVINE COMFORT

The following is the sermon in full given by Rev. Gilstrap at the funeral of Turner auto victims, held at Salem on Thursday, September 4:

"Let not your heart be troubled, yet believe in God believe also in Me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you."—John 14:1-2.

The people of Turner are sitting in sackcloth and ashes,—swift-footed tragedy, like the flash of lightning and the roar of thunder, has swept across our path. Every head is bowed, every tie of affection is taught and trembling. New fountains have broken forth.

Again we are reminded of the fragility of all things mortal and of the certainty of the fact that we must pass on from this earthly tabernacle.

In the lives of those taken we have a magnificent challenge to be ready for the call. Beautiful in their daily living and serving; we did not know how much we depended upon them in the social, the school, the community and most of all in the church life. Their sweet songs yet ring in our hearts; their steadfast attention in their youthful enthusiasm in unselfish service now beckons to each one of you to take their places.

I have been asked to speak some words of comfort but I can find not words quite good enough; so listen with me, will you dear ones to the world's greatest Comforter. He has turned sorrow into song for the millions of stricken hearts down through the ages. He has tinted the tomb with triumph and robbed death of her terror. He says, "Let not your hearts be troubled, believe in God; believe also in me."

His was the divine way of comforting, for first of all he stated a great truth, and anything that is not based on truth is poor comfort. He said, "Ye believe in God." He did not try to prove anything about God, neither do I. He just assumed their faith in God. Hidden away in the human heart is faith in God. You may never have called it out or analyzed it in yourself but it is there, for if it is not you have no door through which comfort may enter.

When we take knowledge of the power and the wisdom and the love of God crowding so wondrously upon us from every member of His creation we come to understand that all things are, in their finality, under His vital control.

"The stars shine over the earth,
The stars shine over the sea;
The stars look up to the mighty God,
And the stars look down on me.
Those stars shall shine for million years,
For a million years and a day,
Yet God and I will dwell in love
When those stars have passed away."

"Believe also in Me." He invites the disciples and you to accept himself as the medium through which this great universal truth of God shall be applied to their needs and to yours. Not that He would chide them for any lack of faith that they might have in Him. How beautiful and completely approachable He is in this invitation.

"Why can't I go home?" he pleaded in a trembling voice, but the hand of the law was firm, and he, with his partner, went to jail instead.

Quick work on the part of Officer E. A. Van de Walker is credited for the arrest of Raymond Swallow and Leroy Fomale who desired to see the world, at least as much of it as exists between Salem and Oregon City. Walking seemed crowded so they took possession of the Buick roadster belonging to Emery Wood. The loss was reported quickly and Officer Van de

Walker set out in pursuit, overtaking them between Salem and Woodburn. When haled before Justice Brazier Small both pleaded guilty and sentence was postponed until Tuesday. Bail was fixed at $500 each and being unable to raise the amount the young cuprits were returned to jail. It was the nth that the desire to go home arose in the mind of one. In answer to his question, the judge merely asked another, "Why didn't you let that car alone?"—Statesman.

Young Swallow formerly was a resident of Turner.

Believe in Me as the one that can answer every need. I am the bread of life, I am the good shepherd. How we need shepherding. I am the way, the truth and the life. Believe in me—I am ready for sin. How terrible and universal is sin. Through me you will find a cleansed, overflowing, happy life of joy and song. The influence of Christianity was what made the lives of those we honor today so spontaneous and cheerful.

Believe in Me as the pledge of immortality. I came to bring life and immortality to light through the gospel. I can not say a more comforting word to you than to tell you that Christ, your saviour, is the resurrection and the life. He took away the sting of death for all who believe in Him. He made the grave the door to glory.

More than this, He give us something beautiful and definite and wonderful to hold on, not in the abstract, but something that will answer the call of our home loving hearts: He says: "In my Father's house are many rooms."

If we turn away from God, our Father, from Jesus our saviour, from the Holy Spirit, our comforter, there is no balm for the broken heart. If we read not the wonderful message of His holy word all other messages become sounding brass and tinkling cymbals.

When we put our hands in His death is not longer tragedy. It is hard for me to say the things on my heart and on the hearts of all those in Turner. Those yearnings can not be put in words, as we think of the dear ones in whom we believed, with whom we worked, and whose winsome smiles greeted us every morning and evening and whose hands ministered to us all along the way.

As the deadening sorrow of the shock wears away you will discover something richer and sweeter in those lives than you had ever known.

Under the weight of this sorrow I turned my mind to next Sunday. What kind of a message will be proper? Then I said "We will ask Ailene to sing for us." Yes, Ailene will sing for us next Sunday and many more Sundays.

Only the Christian religion can give comfort in sorrow; hope in death and reveal the "Sunrise in glory for eternity." How the bunch did sing it just last Sunday when Dr. Epley had them all together. "Sunrise in glory for eternity." Their songs are not dampened. They are sweeter and better.

We can see the proud mother, Sister Briggs, and hear her commending those things of Christian character. We will not soon forget Inez so ready to use her car to bring the aged to church, nor Lois the beautiful bride and sweet manner with which she moved among us. There is not a home among us that will not miss Aunt Frankie and Ailene. Though they have gone on, they are yet with us. Their lives shall increase with each coming year.

"Some day the silver chord will break,
And I no more as now shall sing—
But of the joy when I shall wake,
Within the palace of the King."

RED CROSS TO ASSIST PARENTS AND TEACHERS TRAINING CHILDREN

Assistance to parents and teachers in their efforts to train children in habits of health and physical well-being is found in a recently published bulletin of the Oregon Tuberculosis association listing over a hundred health projects, plays, pantomimes, motion picture strips and similar educational helps. They are available at the association office in Portland.

The bulletin has been prepared by the association's department of child health education which is maintained by it from funds received in the annual sale of Christmas Seals, and contains descriptions of teaching aids which are distributed at cost by the association. Health projects suitable for every grade from kindergarten through high school together with authoritative materials on posture, nutrition, care of the teeth, safety education and other matters may be secured.

With the opening of school the association plans to inaugurate a more intensive program in this type of education in the public schools of the state, and through the state department of public instruction has offered the services of Miss Henrietta Morris, director of its child health education department, to county teachers institutes.

Through this type of training it is hoped to prevent the development of many unhealthful conditions in children and to conserve and improve the condition of the well. Working on the principle that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" the association devotes approximately one-fifth of its annual budget to this phase of the work.

SEVENTY-NINTH BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED SUNDAY

Relatives and friends honored Mr. A. D. Hale on his 79 birthday when they gathered at the Hale home east of town Sunday and enjoyed a birthday dinner. A birthday cake with 79 candles centered the abundantly laden table. Present were, their son in law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Watkins and daughter Vera and Mr. D. Watkins Sr. of Greens Bridge; another son in law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brown of Harlem; Rev. and Mrs. Burgoyne and daughter Ruth, and Walter Peterson, Turner; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Titus and children Alice and Glenn of the Crawfords district.

BACK IN BUSINESS AGAIN

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Barber have resumed the management of the Purity Store here. C. H. Walter, who has had the store since January, left Wednesday with his family for Salem where they will stay a few days and then go to Nebraska to make their home. Mr. and Mrs. Barber are well known here having been in the Purity Store three and half years prior to January.

Salem, Or.—(Special.)—With but little more than a week left before the opening of the 69th annual Oregon State Fair, work in all departments is being pushed rapidly, with last minute repair and construction almost completed for the event here September 22 to 28, according to Mrs. Ella S. Wilson, secretary of the state fair board.
