BEAUTIFUL WILLAMEETTE

The following inspiration of the Willamette valley is from the pen of A. D. Hale, now living east of Turner. Mr. Hale was editor and publisher of The Peoples Press at Albany, some thirty years ago when he wrote the poem:

Willamette, oh beautiful Willamette
Your fields are always green,
Your broad acres stretch,
From hill to hill,
From Portland to Eugene.
Protected on the eastward
By the Cascades capped with snow,
Whose lofty peaks look down,
With never a frown,
On the quiet valley below.
To the west are the Coast Range mountains
Between your farms and sea,
And their tops are kissed
By the gentle winds
Soft floating o'er to thee.
Your soil is ever willing,
Always favored with sun and rain;
From your fields are garnered,
When harvest comes,
Rich crops of fruit and grain.
I love your shaded woodlands,
Your bright and sparkling streams;
Your people who dwell,
In shaded dell,
Or on your hills serene.
Willamette, so beautiful Willamette,
May thy fields be ever green;
May thy homes be the spot,
Whether mansion or cot,
Where love shall reign supreme.
—A. D. Hale
