The 1931 Pacific coast amateur boxing championships will be held in Portland on Friday and Saturday nights, February 13 and 14, according to James J. Richardson, manager of the Multnomah Amateur Athletic club, which organization will sponsor the amateur fistic classic of the far west.

Practically all of the 1930 champions have turned professional which leaves the field wide open to all aspiring mitt wielders. With the Olympic games scheduled for next year at Los Angeles where the world's championship titles will be decided it is expected that a large number of boxers will start getting ready for the Los Angeles tournament by entering the Pacific coast championships next month in this city.

En try blanks may be secured from the Multnomah Amateur Athletic club. Entries close February 6.
