Times Have Changed

Along with thoughts of cherry trees, hatchets and super truthful juveniles, which beset our musings as February 22 approaches, there comes also a few whimsical speculations as to just what the Father of his country would think of it all anyhow were he to come back for a brief sojourn.

When he folded up his work and left in the hands of others the gigantic task he had begun, life was simple and uncomplicated. Big bushy-wiskered men chewed tobacco and ruled the country with an iron hand while the feminine contingent stayed placidly at home making rag carpets and rendering soap grease in lieu of any better career. If they were not wives by the time they were 15 or 16 they became pathetically "Poor old Aunt Maria she never married" at 25!

Hired girls were paid 75 cents for a week's work, which included washing for a family of ten. Eggs were five cents a dozen and butter, when and if there was any, 10 cents a pound. Women had one new dress a year and paid 10 cents a pair for stockings. The Mississippi valley was a dim, unexplored region for the Far West, and Europe only a word in the geography. Adventurous hops into the unknown were made in covered wagons instead of silvery-gray monoplanes.

But times have changed and should George return now, it is a toss-up whether he would be envious or no. Probably not. A comparison between the wholesome simplicity of then and the super sophistication of today does not throw all the advantages to the present. Of course, we have talkies, vacuum sweepers, electric lights and bicycles—but we also have radios across the street, gang wars, chain stores and Aimee Semple McPherson!

George might like it, but probably not. However, even while granting that parenthood at best is a dubious proposition with uncertain rewards, the chances are that in looking over the offspring which he inadvertently fathered, he would feel too much like the staid old barnyard biddy who has hatched off a brood or sea-going step-children. Than which little more can be said!

Fish Oil as Corrective for All Dairy Cattle

There is a possibility that dairymen will soon be feeding fish oils as generally as do the poultrymen. The latter feed cod liver oil to avoid rickets in growing stock, to hold the health of the laying flock and to improve hatchability. It is now being demonstrated that fish oil that is rich in vitamin D will result in healthier calves, will increase the useful life of the cow and is, in a measure at least, a safeguard against breeding troubles. There is still an excess of cod liver oil over what is used for human consumption and for poultry. Investigations in the United States prove the pilchard oil, 4,000,000 gallons of which are produced annually from California sardines, is as rich in vitamin D as cod liver oil. Tuna oil, less abundant, is equally rich. Salmon oil is half as rich. The use of these oils in dairy rations should receive more attention from the research men on our experimental farms and in our colleges.

During First Two Weeks Feed Calves Whole Milk

It is preferable to feed whole milk to calves during the first two weeks after birth, but in case this cannot well be done, whole milk feeding may be limited to one week. Small calves, such as Jerseys and Guernseys, should be given about seven and one-half pounds of milk a day. Larger calves, such as Holsteins, Ayrshires, Short-horns, etc., should be given ten pounds a day until they are at least two weeks old. If this cannot be done without too much trouble, two feedings a day will suffice, but a little smaller quantity of milk should be given. That is, a calf that will consume seven and one-half pounds a day in three feeds should not be given more than about six and one-half pounds a day in two feeds. Overloading the calf's stomach should be carefully avoided. See to it that the milk is always fed at an even temperature of about 95 degrees Fahrenheit.
