Cleanliness Safeguard for Newly Born Calves

Cleanliness is the best safeguard that we can give the newly born calf. Up till fall the calves have been arriving on pasture where nature makes things clean. Troubles are seldom encountered under these conditions but now the calves are arriving in the stable. A clean box stall is the preferable place. It is a good precaution to disinfect the navel immediately, as much trouble enters by this source. Given a good start, the calf should do well on good feed—if the feed pails are kept clean. Dirty feed pails are the abomination of the average stable and the cause of more digestive disorders than all other causes combined. Where the farmer will take the trouble to not only wash but scald the calf pails once daily he will miss a lot of tribulation in calf rearing.

Feed for Calf

A common fault in feeding calves during the first month is to feed too much milk. This is especially true during the first few days. The milk from the dam is not yet fit for human consumption. There is a lot of it. The tendency is to be liberal with the calf to the calf's hurt. The stomach of the little creature is adapted to milk little and often. Overfilling brings on indigestion and scours. The very largest calf should not get over eight pounds of milk daily for the first week.

Dairy Facts

Water is the cheapest and one of the most important dairy feeds. If we can class it as a feed.

When several small calves are kept together small stanchions are a great convenience at feeding time.

Where skim milk is left on the farm the raising of calves is comparatively simple if supplemental feeds are used.

About 87 per cent of milk is water. For plenty of milk, don't forget to give the cow all the water she cares to drink.

Cows give more milk if milked three times a day instead of twice. In observed cases the increase has been from 10 to 25 per cent.

The life of an average woven wire fence when posts are replaced and the fence is restretched, is 18 to 27 years, according to estimates made by 146 Iowa farmers.
