Last week's story on the Aumsville postoffice seems to have stirred up a hornets nest, and the report comes to the editor that Elmer Richards was responsible for the article. We wish to state that Elmer had nothing to do with the article and knew nothing of it until he saw it in The Tribune. Mr. Richards circulated his petition himself, which was signed by a big majority of the Aumsville postoffice patrons and it was not circulated with any malice toward the present management of the postoffice. Elmer, who was the highest in the examination held some time ago took it upon himself to see where he stood among the patrons and circulated the petition. The article was a news item written by the editor.
