Community Club Meets Monday Night

DAIRYMEN'S ASSOCIATION ELECTS NEW OFFICERS ALL DAY MEETING

Saturday, the Turner Dairy Association met at the Turner school in an all day session, with the business meeting and program being held in the high school auditorium and the dinner being served in the gymnasium. A hot water system was demonstrated during the noon hour by the Flame people on the gymnasium porch.

The afternoon session was opened by a short program which included two numbers by a chorus composed of Josephine Gilstray, Leona Cook, Helen Witzel, Anna Johnson, Edmond Turpin and Kenneth Hickok, with Mrs. Pearey at the piano; "The March of the Wooden Soldiers," a group of intermediate boys under the direction of Mrs. C. Edwards; two solo numbers by Mrs. Pearey.

C. A. Bear presided at the meeting and introduced W. H. Henry of Portland, who spoke on cooperative marketing, explaining in detail the marketing of grade C milk and urged the farmers to pay their dues and help to put the cooperative marketing plan over. Mr. Henry also answered many questions of vital interest to the farmer and which will help them in closer cooperation.

R. W. Clark, of the Marion Co-operative unit of Salem, spoke briefly of the work being done there. It was voted to discontinue the Turner Creamery Association organized 16 years ago and become affiliated with the county organization.

L. D. Roberts was elected president; Robert Schaefer, secretary; C. A. Bear, Alfred Anderson, Henry Ahrens, Fred Mitchell and Lawrence Edwards, directors. C. A. Bear is the retiring president, having held the position for the 16 years and W. T. Riches is the retiring secretary.

Mrs. Arleta Steele, who is past ninety years of age, is just a little ahead of most of the matrons about town. She has her spring house cleaning done. Mrs. Steele has made two quilts and three rugs during the past winter and her flower and vegetable garden during the summer is the envy of many a younger person.

METHODIST CHURCH

"A Vision of Christ," was the subject of the morning discourse. The pastor had three texts (1) They saw no man but Jesus only, (2) What is that to thee follow thou me, Jesus is the only perfect pattern. He stands every test. The unsaved cannot get their eyes off of man, but to look at mere man is to get one's eyes off the tract. John Wesley said "Methodists judge themselves not others." The test question for us all is "What think me of Jesus?" Our attitude toward Jesus determines whether or not we are Christians.

The evening text was "Whosoever doeth not bear his cross and come after me is not worthy of me." Those that let business or pleasure take chief place, we were told, shall not eat of His supper. Christianity makes no armistice with other religions. Our religion is not a doctrine, creed, or teaching but just Jesus. He is the Christian's all in all. We had a very interesting brotherhood meeting Tuesday evening.

Timberlick Or The Two Girl Hunters

Chapter II

Hunky Jim pulled the latchstring and came in.

"Hello, Timberlick!"

"Hello, Jim! How's business?"

"Business is slow now. How is it with you?"

"Wal, not so bad. I caught two wolves, a couple of wild cats and a coon today."

"Say, that is good! Timberlick."

"Well, I must be gettin' along. So long and good luck."

"Same to you, so long."

"There is a good friend, Budge," said Timberlick to his best friend, his dog Budge.

He sat there a long while after Hunky Jim left, watching the different pictures the fire made on the logs in the fireplace and smoked his old pipe and thinking of what the morning would bring forth. Then he retired for the night. But, as was the custom of every trapper and hunter, he was sure Old Calamity was loaded and oiled, ready for immediate use.

He arose early (which was also their custom). He took Calamity and Budge and went to get some fresh meat for breakfast. There were plenty of different kinds to choose from—deer, quail, pheasant, grouse, turkeys and many others.

He had only walked about a half mile when Budge began to growl. He looked up to see the meaning of this growl, for he knew it was not a friendly growl. And not more than 200 yards away he saw an Indian with his bow and arrow ready to shoot him. He ducked behind a tree just in time, for the arrow streaked the tree, not over 3 or 4 inches from Timberlick.

Budge growled again and Timberlick saw another Indian to his left. He got closer to the big tree in order to keep out of sight of the two Indians. They were in readiness to shoot at a second's notice, so he had no chance to shoot.

The Indians began to separate and Timberlick hugged close to the trunk of the big tree. They had separated so far that they could almost see him. They still were separating when all of a sudden a shot was fired from somewhere and an Indian dropped. The other one started to run as Old Calamity spoke up, which meant a sudden stop to Mr. Indian.

Timberlick said to Budge: "Who do you suppose that was Old Pal Well, we'll find out. We know it was a friend any way."

So they started out to hunt the one who had saved their lives and scalps.

They started in the direction the report came from to see who it was that shot the first Indian. As they walked along Timberlick was talking to his dog and gun (they were his only housemates and he talked to them most of his time). "The one that fired that shot was not very far away, I don't reckon, but we got one

JOAN CRAWFORD and ROBERT ARMSTRONG in "PAID"

If Joan Crawford ever gets tired of acting she can always make a good living as a fashion creator.

For the youthful Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star is almost as well known for her original style ideas as for her clever work in the dramatic field.

Among her other innovations, Miss Crawford was first to wear the off-the-face hats. The inspiration came while she was on a picture set. After waiting patiently for the cameraman to adjust the lights so that the shadow from her hat brim wouldn't cover her eyes, she became impatient and pushed her brim back against the crowd, revealing her face directly to the light much to the cameraman's delight.

Following release of the picture, off-face hats became ultra-smart and universally popular!

Miss Crawford's latest fashion novelties will be seen in "Paid," her new dramatic vehicle opening Sunday at the Warner Bros. Elsinore theater.
