Timberlick Or The Two Girl Hunters

CHAPTER VI

"This one is Kittie O'Neal, and this one is Addie Sherman."
"If this is Addie Sherman, who are you?" asked Frank Temple.

Before he could answer, Frank grabbed him and the bunch tied him and left him tied when they had prepared beds for the night, for a half-breed was not to be trusted.

The next morning when Timberlick got up the halfbreed had gone, and had taken Hunky Jim's gun.

"Well, he sure know's a good gun anyway," said Timberlick.

(When Timberlick and his friends first got the two whites and the halfbreed in the house he called the whites lads. When he found they were girls, he called them gal boys.)

"Now, gal boys, you get something to eat and I'll go and get some fresh meat."

"We don't want to stay here alone," said the girls.

"You won't be alone. I'll leave Frank and Mike here, and me and Calamity will bring in the meat."

In a short time Timberlick came in with some fresh meat and breakfast was soon prepared.

After the morning meal was over, Hunky Jim and Red Mike went to their own shacks to go around their trap lines. Timberlick went around his trap line. When he got back to the shack he found Red Mike had come back and was sitting in Timberlick's shack with Kittie, Addie and Frank Temple.

When Timberlick came in with his game, Addie came to him and said:

"We are leaving early in the morning for Salt Lake City, Utah."

"Well," said Timberlick, "you had better look out for Injuns, and if anything happens, let me know some way."

The rest of the day was spent by Timberlick directing them over the best trail out to the main road to Salt Lake.

The next morning they got an early start and instead of following Timberlick's directions, Red Mike took them on another trail which led out by his shack.

They had not gone far when they heard the Indian war dance tom toms.

Kittie shouted: "Indians!"

Red Mike said: "Don't shout, Kittie. They'll hear us."

Just then an arrow sang through the air and struck in a tree just a little way from them.

The four of them got behind trees to hide, but were soon surrounded by Indians.

Red Mike went out to make peace with them.

"Me friend to redmen," said Red Mike.

"Huh! White man kill redskin," said the chief.

"No! No! Me friend," said Red Mike, holding his hand out to greet the Indian chief.

Will the Indians make peace or not.

POULTRY FACTS

FRESH AIR CURES CHICKEN'S COLDS

Ventilation and Dry Litter Will Prevent Troubles.

Chickens are unlucky in the structure of their heads, for it makes them susceptible to colds. Poultrymen should try to avoid conditions that will bring on colds, says Dr. E. L. Brunett, of the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine at Cornell university.

In the head, in front of the brain cavity, are thin cones of bones located in chambers. The use of these chambers is to provide a space in which the inhaled air is warmed before it is taken into the lungs. When a chicken develops a simple cold, an excessive amount of secretion forms in these cavities. As this increases, the poor drainage of the cavities allows it to accumulate. This accumulation is an ideal place for bacteria to multiply and the resulting bacterial growth makes the foul odor which is often present with roup.

A simple cold may be avoided or corrected by increasing the warmth with plenty of fresh air and providing plenty of dry litter. If the first stage is not checked the cold may end in roup with its characteristic head swelling and foul odors.

The opinion that roup is a contagious disease is not well founded, according to Doctor Brunett, for there is usually some underlying condition that is indirectly responsible. This may be tuberculosis, or worms, but whatever the cause it should be removed before a cure can be expected.

A third type of cold is more of a distinct disease, commonly known as bronchitis. This condition is acute and the birds die quickly. The cause of the disease is not known. The best treatment is to increase the temperature of the house, either by controlling the ventilation or by using brooder stoves. In the early part of the outbreak it is well to remove all sick birds and put them in heated brooder houses. Most of them will recover when placed in heated houses. Some disinfectants will give relief, but quack remedies should not be used.

Prevent Cannibalism

Cannibalism may develop in a large bunch of chicks, no matter how completely fed or how free from parasites. The liberal use of tar is about as effective as anything in checking it. Watch many times a day for those that have been picked enough to draw blood and daub the tar on the wounds. If you can find something that the chicks dislike the taste of more than tar, use it. If that fails try paring off the point of the upper mandible, using care not to get too deep.
