YEGGMAN'S WIDOW KEPT FROM RICHES

Young Woman Can't Take Them From Hiding Place.

SHADOWED BY U. S. SLEUTHS

Loot of Robbery Buried by Safe Cracker Shortly Before He Was Killed by Detective—Girl Wife Assails Husband Gave His Life to Get Gains and She Will Keep Them.

Savannah, Ga.—Defying the agents of the United States to wrest from her the secret of the hiding place of $54,000 worth of loot amassed by her yeggman husband and buried near Savannah, Mrs. Charles C. Craven, who is twenty years old, returned to Georgia determined to regain the treasure for herself, but afraid to claim it under the eyes of Uncle Sam's men.

Craven, one of the most notorious cracksmen the south has ever known, was killed at Wildwood, Fla., five months ago by a railroad special agent after a running battle on top of a moving freight train. The cracksmen, through a series of postoffice and train robberies in Georgia, Alabama and Florida, had amassed $38,000 in cash and $16,000 worth of jewels, which he took to Savannah and buried near a station on a suburban car line, telling the secret of its location to none but his wife.

After his death the young widow was arrested and held for several weeks while government agents tried to extract from her the secret of the location of the buried treasure. After her release the federal agents began to shadow her. Wherever she went she was followed, in the hope that she would make an attempt to unearth the treasure. Mrs. Craven declares she will never divulge to the government the location of the treasure.

"Charlie paid the penalty for his wrongdoing with his life," she said. "He risked his life to get the money and jewels for me, and they are mine. I will die before I will tell where they are hidden."

When she married the cracksmen, eighteen months ago, in Norfolk, Va., she thought he was a business man. After a honeymoon of three weeks they came to Savannah, and here Craven told her he was a yeggman, but the news did not shake her love for him, and she followed him wherever he wished.

"We went all over the south," she said. "Last summer we were in Memphis for awhile. It was seldom that he left home without returning eighteen or twenty-four hours later with $500 or so. He seldom told me what he had done or any of the circumstances surrounding his operations. I did not ask. But I lived in constant fear that he would be arrested or killed."

"In November we went to Chicago, but did not stay long. My husband carried more than $50,000 through the streets one day there. He spent his money as fast as he got it. He was very liberal with his pals. He was never without a considerable fund with which to pay the traveling expenses of himself and the members of his gang."

"After leaving Chicago we came south. At Owensboro, Ky., my husband blew a safe in a postoffice and got several thousand dollars. Then we came to Atlanta. We got there on the night of Dec. 27, 1913, and walked down Peachtree street, carrying a quart of nitroglycerin in a satchel. From Atlanta Charlie went to Augusta and I came to Savannah. Later he joined me in Savannah, but a few days thereafter he went to southern Florida. Shortly afterward he came back to Savannah with the $38,000 in cash and jewels worth $10,000, which he went out one night and buried."

"Charlie did not stay long in Savannah after burying the money. Then I ran short of money and wrote to him to ask if it would be all right to take some of the hidden money to live on. That letter never reached him. It fell into the hands of the government authorities, and that is how they learned of the buried treasure."

"I was arrested, but no charge could be made against me, as I had not received the stolen goods. After I got out of jail I was besieged by people whom I knew in Savannah to tell the location of the hidden money. Some of them searched for it themselves until they dug up a bottle of nitroglycerin, which we had also hidden. That frightened them so badly that they gave it up."

When Mrs. Craven returned to Georgia for the second time she received numerous letters of a threatening nature from people in Savannah stating that it would be best for her in the end if she told the hiding place of the money and jewels.

"Jailbirds' Save Farmers' Crops. Huntingdon, Pa.—Despairing of securing help in planting his late potatoes and harvesting the wheat on his farm in Henderson township, C. B. Emerick, a well known lumberman, applied to Justice David S. Black for assistance. Huntingdon's accommodating magistrate came to Emerick's rescue. Hastening to the county jail, he released two stalwart young freight riders, who were overjoyed at obtaining their liberty upon no harder condition than going to work on Emerick's farm and saving his crops at good wages and board.

Plans to place the entire main line of the Southern Pacific in Oregon, and possibly the electric lines, under the block system are announced by William Nichols, chairman of the examining board of the Southern Pacific company. The company now has 115 miles out of its 341 miles of main line in Oregon under the block signal system, but it is scattered, having been installed where the safety devices have been most needed.

By practically a unanimous vote at the annual meeting of the Hood River Apple Growers' Association, the members of the organization adopted by-laws that will revolutionize the methods by which the affairs of the local selling agency, an affiliated concern of the North Pacific Fruit Distributors, have been administered. The vote was a culmination of action taken at a meeting in the latter part of May, when the by-laws were proposed. Since that time the new rules and regulations have been studied and discussed at different meetings by the growers, who adopted them.

Revealing a material falling off in national bank deposits and a large gain in state bank deposits, a statement issued by State Bank Superintendent Sargent of the condition of the banks of Oregon June 30, while indicating a decreased volume of trade as compared with the same period of last year, reflects sound financial conditions. Mr. Sargent is unable to account for the decrease of national bank deposits unless it is due to the nation-wide lull in business, and with that decrease he is also unable to account for the increase of almost $2,000,000 in deposits in state banks.

PHILIPPINES TO BE FREE SOON

Bill Provides For Independence When Isles Are Stable.

TO ABOLISH COMMISSION.

Administration Measure Laid Before Congress—Senate Provided For Christian Provinces to Possess Suffrage—Non-Christian Tribes to Vote Through Appointees of Governor.

Washington.—A plan, approved by the administration, for a more autonomous government in the Philippines as another step toward independence was laid before congress when Representative Jones of Virginia introduced a bill covering the subject. Mr. Jones is chairman of the house insular committee, and his measure, declaring the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the Philippines, follows a long series of conferences with President Wilson, Secretary Garrison, Manuel Queson, the Philippine resident commissioner to the United States, and Democratic members of the insular committee.

Supporters of the measure do not expect it to get favorable action by congress at this session, but are hopeful of action at the December session. The bill is designed to carry out the declarations of the Baltimore platform.

The bill makes no attempt to fix a date for Philippine independence, but asserts that it always has been the purpose to recognize the independence of the Philippine Islands "as soon as a stable government could be established therein."

Mr. Jones, explaining his Philippine bill, said: "Generally speaking, the bill provides for the Philippine Islands the most liberal form of a territorial government. Its principal features, affecting the more important changes in the existing organic act, are those relating to the enlarged powers conferred upon the governor general and the abolition of the present Philippine commission as such and the substitution thereof of a senate the members of which representing Christian provinces shall be elected by popular vote.

"The non-Christian tribes are to be represented in the legislature by two senators and nine representatives appointed by the governor general. The only officials to be appointed by the president are the governor general and the members of the supreme court. The governor general is given a limited power of veto over the acts of the legislature, but the president would have the power of absolute veto.

"The right to vote is confined to citizens of the islands, and the educational qualification of the present law is so enlarged as to embrace those who can read and write a native language instead of English or Spanish, as at present.

"Two resident commissioners to the United States are to be elected by popular vote."

Speaking for the Filipinos, Resident Commissioner Queson, an active advocate of Philippine independence for years, gave the bill his approval. "It represents," he said, "far less than ought to have been considered, but I strongly favor its enactment because it is a step in the right direction."
