Why Made in Oregon?

The state is the midst of a "made-in-Oregon campaign". Every Oregon consumer knows that is a good thing for Oregon. Every agency of education and publicity—the newspapers, the commercial clubs, the merchants, the manufacturers—is used to foster the sentiment for home-made articles. Protect home industry is the commercial religion of Oregon.

But wool, cheese, eggs, butter fruit, lumber and shingles, and many similar products, and are made in Oregon, just as furniture, breakfast foods, canned goods, clothing, blankets, and innumerable other articles of finished manufacture are made in Oregon.

The Oregon hen, the Oregon cow, the Oregon farm and the Oregon orchard—the mainstay of thousands of homes—are just as much entitled to protection as the merchant and the manufacturer.

The country storekeeper of Oregon passes many sleepless nights of worry over the fact that the postoffice of his town is daily crowded with letters and money for the mail order houses of Chicago. But what is going to stop the invasion of the inferior products of China, New Zealand and Australia into Oregon?

The Portland artificer demand the favor of Oregon for his output, and joins a movement to discourage the competition of other states. What is he doing to save the home market for the Oregon farm, dairy, orchard, stock ranch and poultry yard?

If there is to be free trade with China and the other cheap marts of the Old World, why should there not be free trade with every state in the Union?

Is the made in Oregon slogan intended only for the Oregon manufacturer or should it be extended to all Oregon production?—Oregonian.

Political Dope.

Portland, Oregon, Aug. 21: Where did Dr. Smith, Democratic candidate for Governor, get the nice little fixed-up speech which he gives almost word in every place where he talks? There are some people in Portland who are uncharitable enough to the "West candidate to suggest that the speech was edited in the inner editorial office of the magnificent new building recently put up by Col. Jackson for the Oregon Journal; they further whisper that the speech was afterward carefully censored by Governor West himself so that nothing dangerous to the West interests should appear therein. Then, the story goes, after the speech had been pruned and patched up, it was type-written on a nice clean piece of paper and given to Dr. Smith to learn. Those who have heard the speech in different places declare that he has learned "his little piece" just as it was given to him and is reciting it without a slip of the tongue.

It is wondered by some here if the present nervous activity of the Oregon Journal and its editorial effort to make out that Dr. Withycombe is a "corked" candidate, is not an attempt to distract attention from its own reported activities in "canning" Dr. Smith's speech. They point out that it was only a short time ago that the Journal was throwing bouquets at Dr. Withycombe for his fearlessness in expressing his opinion. These editorials appeared under the headline, "Dr. Withycombe's candor." Does the Journal want its readers to believe Dr. Withycombe to be a fearless but mistaken man or do they want their readers to believe the present story they are telling that the Republican candidate is an amiable man, but afraid to express his mind?

It is a curious thing that this nervous bustle in the editorial sanctum of the great non-partisan (?) daily of Oregon has only started within the last few days. This circumstance linked with rumors going about that the Democrats are trying to trade off Smith votes for Chamberlain votes, lends force to the notion that the Democratic managers have at last come to a realization that their hope of electing Dr. Smith is absolutely forlorn and they are up to the same old stunt of "saving George."

BRIEF WAR NEWS

At the end of three weeks' conflict none of the combatants succeeded in delivering a serious blow. The honors of the third week belong to Germany, but no achievement on either side deserves to be called a victory. The French gained gratifying successes in Alsace, and the Germans, by a steady pressure, obliged a large portion of the Belgian field army to retire on Antwerp.

The German advance into Belgium was without serious check. Having taken Brussels, the troops of Emperor William forced their way steadily and rapidly to the north and west and overran the whole of northern and western Belgium, and southeast of Brussels they invested the fortified city of Namur on the Meuse.

British and French troops are facing a force believed to consist of the greater part of the German army along a battle line which extends from Mons to the frontier of Luxembourg.

Operations in other sections of Belgium indicate that few German forces are being spared from the great conflict. It is said only a small force continues in Brussels—perhaps 3000 men—and Antwerp reports the country in its vicinity cleared of Germans. Small forces are holding the villages along the line of march, to prevent interference with the route of communication.

The French developed an imposing encircling movement in Lorraine, trying to drive the Germans back toward Strassburg.

This was an offensive movement, containing possibilities of much danger, because of the enormously strong German fortifications in the area of operations. French troops gained half a dozen towns after several days' fighting, but the Germans suddenly took the offensive themselves and the French quickly retreated across the boundary, gaining nothing by their work.

St. Petersburg announces officially that the Russian army is advancing along the entire Austro-German frontier and at the same time successfully maintaining the offensive at every point of contact with the enemy.

The Russian advance into Prussia is following the line of the railway from Eydkuhnen toward Konigsburg. Opposed to it is an entire division of German infantry, heavily supported by artillery. The Germans are stubbornly defending their positions. Forced from one line, they move back to another already prepared, carrying their artillery with them. The Russians are forced to charge and take each advanced line of trenches at the point of the bayonet.

The main invasion of Austria is through the Sty river valley. Sweeping successes are reported in this section. The army from the mobilization triangle of Dubno, Revno and Krasne, has penetrated 35 miles inland in the general direction of Lemberg, capital of Galicia. Practically continuous fighting has occurred. In this fighting it is declared that an Austrian division was completely routed and that 17 guns and more than 1500 prisoners were taken. The Russians are reported as following up their advance and to be pushing on toward Lemberg.

A German official statement says that troops under the command of the Crown Prince of Bavaria, fighting between Metz and Vosges, took 10,000 prisoners and fifty guns. It adds that the French troops opposing the Germans comprised eight army corps. A Paris statement declares this is absurd but admits reverses in Lorraine. Reports from the Austrian-Servian boundary say that the Servians have won a battle on the Drina, which military experts consider highly probable, as the Servians have a comparatively small army but one which has passed through two years' actual war and therefore has the advantage of veterans fighting against amateurs.

If a friend pulls his watch on your funny story cut it short.
