LIME-SULPHUR SPRAY.

The simplest form of lime-sulphur solution and probably the best for you to experiment with is the so called self boiled solution, says the Orange Judd Farmer. This is made of eight pounds of stone lime, eight pounds of powdered sulphur and fifty gallons of water. It is best made in large quantities because a larger amount of heat is developed by the lime than if only a small amount is made at once.

Supposing you want to make 200 gallons of the mixture, put thirty-two pounds of stone lime in a barrel or tub with five or six gallons of water. As soon as the lime begins to slake vigorously put in thirty-two pounds of powdered sulphur. Stir constantly and add more water as needed, so that it forms a thick paste and is thoroughly heated. When the boiling has stopped and before any red or orange streaks appear in the mixture add several gallons of cold water to cool it. Strain it, dilute the 200 gallons and the mixture is ready to put in the spray machine and apply. The other forms of lime-sulphur solution are somewhat similar, but are made by boiling the mixture in a kettle.

Suckers on Fruit Trees.

The suckers or water sprouts that result from heavy pruning should not be removed until the second year, and then there will be some of them well placed and growing in right position to fill a vacancy here and there in lower zone of tree, and in two or three years be bearing fruit of same kind as tree provided it is a budded or low grafted tree—if not, it, too, may be grafted.
