Farm and Garden

GROWING VEGETABLES.

Information as to Soil and Methods of Seed Planting.

[Prepared by the United States department of agriculture.]

Carrots need to be sown very thickly because the seeds are very small and germinate very slowly. An excellent plan is to sow a few radish seeds with the carrots so as to mark the row and make earlier cultivation possible. Two good varieties are early scarlet horn and Chantenay.

Cauliflower is the most delicate member of the cabbage family. With it the flower is the part used for food. It does best in cool, moist climates.

The greatest success is likely to come if the heads start to form before or after the long hot summer days. It is raised in practically the same manner as cabbage.

Celery should be kept growing steadily all through the season. Any check in its growth—such as frost, wilting at transplanting time or insufficient supply of moisture—is likely to cause it to go to seed.

Chard or Swiss chard is an excellent plant for providing greens during the late summer. It has leaves that resemble beet leaves, except that they are a light yellowish green. The leaves are prepared the same as spinach and the stalks and midribs are used the same as asparagus.

Cucumbers.—The earliest cucumbers are raised by sowing the seed in dirt bands about a month before seed can be sown out of doors. A heavy soil

ONTARIO BAND IS READY TO GIVE PUBLIC CONCERTS

The Ontario Encore Band was organized October 20, 1914, by D. B. Colcord, at the request of several members of the high school, and by the assistance of the Commercial club and others interested in music.

It consists at present of the following officers and members:

President, Frank Evans, clarinet.
Vice President-Treasurer, H. O. Drane, clarinet.
Secretary, Rowland Koenig, bass is preferred for raising a good crop for pickling. Almost any of the various strains of the white spine will do well. For pickling the Chicago pickling and Boston pickling varieties are very popular.

Egg plants require a long season and a high temperature. In our hot dry summers they will do very well if the plants are started early. The fruits are mostly black or purple in color, of rather variable size and shape. They are usually sliced and fried for serving. New York purple is a good variety.

Endive is raised as a very early crop in spring, but better as a late fall crop. It is blanched in order to reduce its bitterness and make it more tender. Blanching is done in two or three weeks by tying the tops together. Endive is often stored for winter use in the same way as is celery.

Horseshoe is a perennial plant, but is generally grown as an annual. It is raised by planting root cuttings about four or six inches long with the tops about three inches below the surface of the soil and about eighteen inches apart in the row. These root cuttings are the lateral roots trimmed off of the large roots when they are harvested. The roots should all be harvested at the end of the first year, taking care not to break off any side roots that would be left in the soil, or the horsehoes will become a very bothersome weed.

Kohl rabi is the member of the cabbage family with an enlarged stem. It is often called turnip-rooted cabbage. It is raised by either transplanting the plants for early use or sowing the seed outdoors and thinning to about six or eight inches. In quality it is superior to turnips.

Mr. Drane, the well known agent of the O. S. L. Ry., was a member of the first Ontario band, organized seven years ago, and Charles A. Garvin was also a member of that organization.

Mr. Stewart, who is a fine solo cornetist, was formerly the leader of a prize band of Denver, Colo., and has kindly consented to assist the conductor at rehearsals and concerts when they do not conflict with his duties at the O. S. L. depot.

C. C. Taylor was formerly a member of a Washington band, and M. C. Shoup was a member of a Mexico band for several years. James Fifer played the saxophone in a Salem Ore., band and D. A. Gregor played with an orchestra in Idaho. L. E. Ramey is also an experienced player who has recently joined this band.

The conductor was leader of the signal corps United States army post band at Georgetown Heights, D. C., for two years during the civil war in 1863 to 1865, and has since been leader and teacher of many musical organizations in the middle west and in Oregon. The other members are simply students of the Ontario schools, many of them having had no previous musical education or experience. They deserve great praise for their perseverance in mastering the rudiments of music, and the technique of their instruments, while attending to their school duties.

Free concerts will be given by the band in the city park, near the depot, every week, commencing May 30.
