THE TWELVE MILLION FOREIGNERS

There are today twelve million aliens in the United States. They owe no allegiance to the United States government; they are citizens of foreign powers. Some expect to be naturalized; others not. Many expect to stay here indefinitely; others want to make a little stake and hie back to the old country, where leisure can be bought for less money. There are villages in Hungary practically rebuilt in the last ten years with money earned in America. Some of the twelve million can read; others not.

The twelve million are fairly hard to reach. They cannot be approached and reasoned with as if they were naturalized or native born. We can make no legitimate appeal to their sense of patriotism or duty because their duty as citizens is toward the motherland until they formally shift allegiance. Many of them are partially immunized against contagious American thought by lack of English and residence in little colonies. But we can and should point out to any who are disposed to commit acts contrary to the national welfare the advantages of residence here, the ease with which the police power can be invoked for their restraint, if necessary, and the responsibilities off guests toward hosts.

All of us, native, naturalized, or alien, know why the twelve million are here. They came because they would be better off, earn higher wages, live in better homes, wear better clothes and escape the twin handicaps of military service and taxation to defray huge military establishments. Now that war is pauperizing Europe, the twelve million who escaped with their lives and prosper here have all the more reason to feel grateful toward the United States. Knowing better than most of us the penalties of war and burden of armaments, they should be the last to lend their support to a cause whose success might lead the United States into the horrors they escaped. Perhaps ten of the twelve million feel that way about it; but under competent leadership two million recalcitrants can make much noise and cause much mischief. The two million, if they will not remember that they were here upon sufferance, must be reminded that the government has ample power to bring this truth home to them in a manner which they will not enjoy and the necessity for which their hosts would as deeply deplore.

MEDICAL TRIUMPHS.

The war doesn't check all wholesome progress, by any means. In the realms of surgery and medicine it is promoting progress—for the very reason that doctors have more material to work on, and can apply their theories more freely than under ordinary conditions.

In the notable advance made since the war began, American physicians have played a conspicuous part. A nurse just returned from service with the American ambulance corps in France tells how the medical profession in France has been astonished at the daring feats performed by our surgeons. They have been particularly successful in grafting bones to prevent disfigurements. Many of the soldiers are shot in the face and hideously mutilated. In a great many cases their jaws are shot away. The surgeons have actually been making "new faces" for these unfortunates, removing bones from slain men or from amputated limbs and using them to build up shattered jaws and other features.

It will be recalled that Dr. Alexis Carrell, American winner of the Nobel prize for medicine, a pioneer in the transplanting of bone and muscular tissue, has been working in Paris since the war began, and his marvelous achievements have doubtless been the inspiration of the whole American corps.

In curative and preventive medicine our own physicians have rendered service just as notable. The credit for cleaning up disease-ridden Serbia and eliminating the deadly typhus plague is given chiefly to American doctors. And their efforts have by no means been confined to aiding the Allies. There are many skilled Americans serving in the German and Austrian armies where their skilful and unselfish labors have won just as high praise.

The whole world will gain from the lessons learned in this great war clinic. And we, apparently, shall gain most of all; for we are likely to get the benefit without having to pay the price in dead, sick and wounded soldiers as subjects for the experiments.

The war has had an effect on countless activities on this side of the Atlantic but the red-blooded American will rejoice in contemplating the fact that the world's series will be fought out just as if the people of Europe had never decided to go into the business of killing each other off.

Dr. Cook was arrested as a German spy. Trust the doctor to get the maximum amount of free advertising out of the incident.
