REPUBLICAN AGENTION.

From Asia as well as from Europe comes the report that there is a strong republican agitation in behalf of the abolition of monarchy. The leaders of such movements are strongly in favor of a republican form of government.

between Edith Cavell and Mary Pickford. And in these days of movies, almost any student in a senior or junior of any university, just by looking at the billboards would know that Mary Pickford is not or was not engaged in any war duty, unless it be pictorial war on the screen.

Another student, it is alleged, said that Mr. Wilson was a former president and that St. Paul wrote the ten commandments. As to the ten commandments, there are a great many adults, who may or may not have gone through college, who are not able to answer the question.

WASHINGTON'S GREATNESS.

In the course of centuries many men have attained high position and power and their fame has been trumpeted abroad. Yet today they are forgotten and it is only by searching narrowly the pages of history we learn that such personages ever lived.

There are other men who with the passing years loom up larger in the estimation of mankind. Posterity recognizes even more than did the age in which they lived their virtues and abilities and their service to humanity.

Of course all this was admitted even in his lifetime. But today, after the more than a century of varied political and other experiences the nation has endured since his death, his wisdom, political sagacity and wise statesmanship, as well as his character and military qualities, are more gratefully recognized than ever.

The meeting of the republicans at Vale on Lincoln's birthday was a fitting tribute to the martyred president and it was timely to discuss the organizing of the county for the coming campaign. There are many reasons why the coming campaign is the most important that the party has ever been in and it is necessary that the full strength of the party be voted in every precinct in the whole country in order to redeem the nation from the plunge they are making to bankruptcy through the incompetency of the present officials.

Some men fade away from the public mind with the lapse of time. With others time only enshrines them more firmly in the memory of a grateful nation. This is especially true of Washington and Lincoln, whose birthdays are being commemorated this month in all parts of the country.

It is recorded in holy writ that a woman caused the downfall of man through the aid of an apple and now we are informed that the wife of our president, the first lady of the land, is a marked example of the benefits to be derived from the eating of an apple every morning.

The organizing of a cow testing club in this section will mean dollars to every man who becomes a member. There is but one way to know the good cow from the poor one and that is by means of the scales and Babcock tester.

The meeting of the Commercial Club to be held on Monday evening is the important meeting of the year, when the officers for the year are to be selected. The officers have much to do with the shaping of the affairs and the enlisting of the members for constant effort in building up the community.

Villa says he will never come to the United States. We should worry.

The days are longer and if you don't notice it, just believe it. It will make the winter days go faster.

A Michigan man has been arrested with three eyes in his possession. This is a clear case of emotional insanity.

It's easy to understand Mr. Roosevelt's clamor for a greater army and navy. He can't live always, and doesn't want to leave us entirely unprotected.

That couple that lived in the Maine woods as Adam and Eve has returned to civilization. How they must hate to give up notoriety, which was all they craved.

A Detroit physician and sanitary expert says that kisses and dishes breed disease. One can very well get along without kisses, but how to get along without dishes is yet an unsolved problem.

An actress sues an insurance company to get the amount of a policy on her hair. The company probably thinks that the risk on movable property is too great in the case of little things like that.

The potential emperor of China, Yuan Shi Kai, says his country needs a new constitution. Maybe it does. But Yuan himself may need a pretty robust one before he gets through with the imperial business.

Lord Roseberry has given the last fatal stroke to Henry Ford. He calls him "a manufacturer of preambulators." This is supposed to be real humor in England. But Lord Roseberry is evidently more at home when he lectures on literary themes.

Another poison-pen girl has been arrested. She is said, of course, to be mentally unbalanced. Well, her arrest has brought much relief to many husbands and wives who did not know exactly how much she knew about their own selves.

NOT ALWAYS TO BLAME.

Another batch of mistakes has been reported from an American university and attempts are being made to prove again that our system of education is a failure.

This time the university of Minnesota is the objective point of the attack, and the mistakes made by the students of the senior and junior classes are the "goats" over whose back higher education is being severely castigated.

Some alleged mistakes of the students have been taken as a fair sample of the insufficiency of the educational methods prevailing in our schools.

For instance, a student is alleged to have answered a question about William Jennings Bryan by saying he was president of the United States. Now this sounds a good deal like a hoax on the part of the student. For unless that student is an exception to the general rule, he must once in a while read a newspaper, especially since the war began. He must at least have seen once in a while some pictures in the dailies or weeklies bearing upon Mr. Wilson, and learned that he is the president of the United States.

Another student said that Mary Pickford was recently shot by the Germans. There is quite a difference
