FOX FARM IS LATEST THING IN RANCHES

Blue Mountain Farmer Goes To Canada to Get Stock for his Venture They Pay Big Dividends.

A fox farm is one of the latest industries for the county says the Blue Mountain Eagle of Canyon City. It is owned by P. A. Snyder and is probably the only one of its kind in the state. For a number of years Mr. Snyder was the proprietor of the John Day Drug store. Some time ago he sold out his interests with the idea of launching an enterprise that he has had under consideration for a good many years.

From the government he secured a tract of about five acres on Dixie Butte, or near what is known as Huckleberry Flat. Here he has prepared his pens. Wire fences were put around the place in order to keep the foxes from digging out, the wire was laid in trenches. He has built a new modern bungalow and has gone to considerable expense to start the industry. He will have a cash outlay of something in excess of $10,000.

Mr. Snyder was in Canyon City a few days ago and said that he was planning to leave in a few days to get his fox. He will import them from Canada and they come from a fox farm north of Michigan. He will secure four pair of the black or silver gray fox. In the state of Maine this is a great industry and also in Canada. On King Edward's Island the industry has reached such proportions that it has an assessed valuation of something like fifteen million dollars. Fortunes have been made raising not only the fox, but other fur bearing animals. The pelt of the silver gray fox runs in value anywhere from $200 to $1500 and there is a steady demand. Mr. Snyder has studied over the local conditions and is satisfied that they will thrive in this climate and he has picked an ideal place for their propagation. Just what Mr. Snyder has had to pay for his start was not given out, but some of the foxes are sold for $1500 a piece.
