HATCH CHICKENS NOW

Poultryman Makes His Greatest Profit from Birds Hatched Before First of May.

The poultryman makes his greatest profit from chickens which are hatched before May 1. The early hatched cockerels are sold as broilers when the broiler market is at its best. The flood of late hatched broilers brings prices down and congests the market. The greater returns received from early hatched broilers go far toward defraying the cost of raising pullets. These pullets in turn begin laying when eggs are bringing the highest prices and when there is the greatest shortage of strictly fresh eggs.

Still more important, early hatched chickens grow more rapidly than those hatched late in the season and are much less likely to become sick. The late hatched chickens always are the first to catch cold and spread disease throughout the flock. Chickens hatched late in the year will not mature before cold weather and usually will not lay until well into the winter, or even toward spring. This means that they will have to be fed and carried over for several months at a constant expense, with no return, and this at a time when feed is at its highest.

The early hatched pullets can be developed to a large extent on range, and a saving in grain feed is possible in this way.

The highest producing pullets are those which begin laying early. To get into the 200-egg class a pullet must lay 60 or more eggs before March 1. In order to do this, pullets must be hatched before May 1, so that they will begin laying by the 1st of November. In the section of the country north of the Ohio river it is advisable to begin hatching not later than March 1 and to continue hatching at intervals through March and April, so that pullets of different ages will be coming on, and the broilers will not all be ready for market at the same time.

The American breeds (Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds, etc.) should be hatched earlier than the Mediterranean breeds, such as the Leghorns, Minorcas, etc., because they take about one month longer to mature. Pullets of the American breeds will begin laying at about 7 months of age, and those of the Mediterranean breeds at about 6 months.

It is often difficult to get enough broody hens to set the hens early. This may be partly overcome by setting the earliest eggs in an incubator and putting those eggs under hens a few days before they are ready to hatch. A hen usually can brood from one and one-half to two times as many chickens as she will hatch, so that additional chickens hatched in the incubators can also be given to hens which are hatching eggs at the same time.

Early hatching will produce more eggs in the fall and winter, while a larger proportion of hens will get broody early in the spring, thus completing the necessary circle for early fall egg production.

Early hatched chickens are by far the most profitable in every way.

UNITE AND GROW

Weiser, Idaho, has two splendid newspapers and they are both doing a grand work for that community and are deserving of the most liberal support and encouragement of the people of Weiser and vicinity. But, just now, they are expending their splendid energies in tearing into each other over the matter of Boise's relation to the north and south highway, which is entirely a fruitless endeavor. It would probably not make a difference of $100 a year to Weiser whether that highway went through the Weiser valley or goes up the Payette valley. But it would make a whole lot of difference to Weiser and to Boise should the Weiser newspapers, instead of fighting each other over this trivial matter, get together and boost for the establishing of wholesale and commission houses at Weiser and have that splendid city and the entire contributing country supplied from Weiser instead of from Boise as at present. Weiser is the natural center for the trade of the Weiser valley and it should be able to extend its business over into Oregon and other adjacent territory. But at present Weiser and vicinity is doing just exactly what Caldwell and Nampa and Payette and Ontario and other towns and cities are doing in southwestern Idaho—paying tribute to Boise, and the capital city takes toll upon most of the things that the people of this section buy and consume. That is why Boise is a city of some 20,000 population, when its natural resources do not entitle it to a larger population than 10,000, if that much.

Weiser is the natural center for that whole section as Caldwell is the natural center for this whole section, and the merchants of Weiser could without the outlay of a single penny more to themselves, rather it would be a great profit to themselves, organize wholesale and commission houses to satisfy their own needs by each taking stock in a concern of this kind and could extend their business by supplying the stores of Cambridge, Council, Midvale, New Meadows, etc., and take the cream themselves, just the same as the merchants of Caldwell could combine to supply their own needs and extend a wholesale and commission business to supply the needs of Payette and Boise valleys. Were relations natural, Caldwell or Nampa would be supplying this territory and Boise, too, instead of the conditions being reversed and Boise supplying from its little seat in a corner of the hills this whole territory to and beyond Weiser and taking all the cream therefrom. Because the towns along the Short Line are dead to their interests they emulate on their lean pickings while Boise grows fat from our lack of business sense and enterprise. So the Weiser newspapers ought to get wise. Quit fighting each other. Unite your forces and your energies to the end that Weiser gets what is justly her own and in two or three years there will be a couple of fine dailies at Weiser and Boise will be that country village that nature intended her to be but the enterprise of her people have made it something otherwise.—Caldwell News.

Read The Argus Advertisements

Every week the Argus carries the message of many of Ontario's business men. These messages tell what the stores have to offer. A careful perusal of them will save the buyers of this vicinity time and money.

The man who advertises his goods stands behind them. If he is not willing to do so he would not tell the public about them.

During the past few weeks the little want ads in the Argus have brought buyers and sellers together. The rancher who has chickens to sell will find a buyer by using these columns.

Get the habit. If you have something to sell advertise it. If you want to buy something advertise it.
