PRISONERS MIGHT BUILD BIG DAMS

Proposition to Bring Prisoners of War to America on Returning Transports May Be Suggested to Authorities.

That it would be good public policy to use returning transports to bring German and Austrian prisoners of war to the United States and put them to work building great irrigation works, instead of risking merchant ships to carry food to them in France and England, is a plan which will probably be suggested to authorities by local people if present suggestions are approved.

Those who favor such a move declare that since the United States has to supply the food which is being used to feed the thousands of prisoners in Europe, and since the army transports will have no goods to bring back after carrying troops over, the full use of the ships both ways could be secured by bringing the prisoners to the food they will consume, rather than to use other merchant ships for that purpose. At the same time in the isolated camps these prisoners could be guarded by a comparatively few men who are not of military age and while solving the labor shortage on government works it would also accomplish the development of the country. This would in turn increase the food supply and result in the solution of another vexing problem.

It is pointed out by local men that a few thousand prisoners could be profitably employed on the Warm-springs project and in that section be guarded by but a few men at small cost. Since the entry of the United States into the war such a plan has been broached elsewhere and there is a hope that if many communities back such a movement that the authorities may look with favor upon such a plan. It would relieve France and England of the burden of feeding thousands of idle men, while at the same time enable the United States to develop great areas at a minimum cost.

you, and confidently place in your hands this great trust: to prove that Freedom's people are ready to respond universally, at the time and in the manner most effective; to serve so well our common cause that your service will make it triumph; and to perform faithfully your part in banishing autocracy from the earth."

OLD ADVERSARIES JOIN IN MEMORIAL

ism to uphold the leaders of the nation in this war for freedom.

Lincoln Eulogized.

In his address as the orator of the day, District Attorney R. W. Swagler reviewed this history of the United States prior to the great war, giving especial attention to the growth of Abraham Lincoln from a country legislator to the greatest figure of the most trying epoch of the nation's history. Briefly the speaker drew a parallel between the crisis of those stirring days and that in which the nation now finds itself, and eloquently lauded the life and work of the great Emancipator, whose example gives birth of renewed national devotion.

Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by Miss Ethel McWilliams and musical numbers were sung by a quartette composed of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Dickson, Mr. and Miss Vom Readen.

When the Mayor called the roll of veterans the following answered: Romano A. Costes, M. Backman, Thomas D. Barton, George W. Blanton, Henry Gifford, James F. Jamison, Gilbert L. King, Andrew McGregor, John S. Millikin, Richard S. Rutherford, Joseph Tague and Henry C. Wilson, all veterans of the Union army. The Confederate veterans who responded were Col. S. F. Taylor and S. A. Moore. Each of the old soldiers made a few brief remarks.

VISITING SCRIBE SAYS ROAD BONDS ARE NEEDED

J. E. Stewart, editor of the Forest Journal who combines his activity of editorial writing with running a big ranch and attending grange meetings was in Ontario last Thursday on his way home from Hood and Central Oregon where he has been campaigning with W. L. Thompson for the road bond issue.

Mr. Stewart says that the people of Central Oregon are for the bonds, that they are needed and that the people of the John Day valley are united in their support of the measure.

THE UNIVERSAL INSTRUMENT

Thirty years ago the telephone was a luxury. Today, through personal initiative and private enterprise, it has become a necessity within the reach of everybody. Where once a business had but one telephone with a limited talking range, today that business has service with a range three-quarters of a continent broad, and every branch of every business is linked to every other by an intercommunicating telephone system.

The telephone has earned its responsible place and there are now 8,000,000 Bell telephones in this country, over which 26,000,000 talks daily.

Every Bell Telephone is a Long Distance Station.
