The Anthracite Jehu.

The coal cart driver is nature's most wonderful diabolician. He knows all the profane branches of his mother tongue. When a coal cart driver obstructs a motorman it is fifty-fifty which insults courtesy most. The papers never mention it because cold print cannot reproduce fervor.

The coal cart driver treats diamonds with disrespect and has no favors for millionaires. Why should one kotow who sits upon a dusty fortune? Never! And he tosses coal into your cellar as if it were worth no more than Irish potatoes or automobiles.

Still, for the coal cart driver we have some veneration. At least he is not uptish, at least he is democratic, at least he mingles without pride and does not wear a wrist watch.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Bessarabia.

The original inhabitants of Bessarabia are believed to have been Cimarians, after whom came the Scythians. Because it was the key to one of the approaches toward the empire of Byzantium the province was invaded by many successive races during the early centuries of the Christian era. Trajan incorporated it with the province of Dacia, and in the next century the Goths poured into it, to be followed in turn by the Huns, the Avars and the Bulgarians. In the seventh century a Thracian tribe, known as the Bessi, settled there and gave to the land its name.

Universal and Eternal.

"Yes, life is universal and eternal, for time is one of its factors—yesterday the moon, today the earth, tomorrow Jupiter. In space there are cradles and tombs. The red carbon stars will soon be dead; the hydrogen stars, like Vega and Sirius, are the stars of the future; Procyon, Capella and Arcturus are the stars of the present. Aldebaran seems to be already an autumn fruit." So said Flammarion.

Sportingly Considered.

"Remember the story of the hare and the tortoise?"

"Yes," replied Ernestus Puckley. "But dat story don't tell you nuffin 'bout de odds dat was posted an' de tortoise. Dem long shots do come in sometimes, but you hain't 'pead on em."—Washington Star.

Miafts at the Bargain Sale.

Nell—I stopped in at a bargain sale today. Kalle—Did you see anything that looked real cheap? Nell—Yes; several men waiting for their wives.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Conceit.

"Pa, what is a conceit?"
"A mental disease, my boy, that is dangerous only when it becomes chronic."—Detroit Free Press.
