CHURCH NOTES

Congregational Church News and Announcements.

There was a good, large sized gathering of pumpkins, pippins and people at the Harvest Festival at the Congregational church last Sunday. Loads of apples, squash, pumpkins, beets, hops, and corn fodder were arranged about the building in artistic confusion. Rev. Sullens was unable to arrive until noon and the address on "What Shall I Render Unto the Lord For All His Benefits Toward Me" was delivered by the pastor. At noon the bountiful basket lunch was spread and partaken of by some 80 odd people. In the afternoon business session which followed an address by Dr. Sullens, the congregation voted the drafting of an application to the Congregational church building society for aid in the erection of a church building.

At the morning service next Sunday the Lord's Supper will be celebrated. In the evening at 7:30 o'clock the pastor's subject will be "What's in a Name." Note the change in time.

The church will be represented at the annual meeting of the Idaho State Conference meeting at Boise, October 2, 3 and 4 by four delegates, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McCreight, Mrs. W. F. Homan, Mrs. Herbert Livingston and the pastor.

"If you must swear," reads a sign in an army Y. M. C. A. tent at Camp Kearny, Luda Vista, Cal. "whistle it."

Sheet music and portable musical instruments are in great demand among the American troops in France. The national war work council of the Y. M. C. A. is sending all instruments across the ocean that are donated for this purpose.

Educational courses for all enlisted men that desire to improve their time while in the army are being arranged by Army Y. M. C. A. secretaries wherever the men express a desire for it. In this way the soldiers may fit themselves to secure better positions and command higher wages when they return to private life after the war is over. It also gives them a profitable way to spend their spare time.

COMMUNICATION.

To the Editor:
The right of self defense inures to nations, communities and individuals united together for the purpose of promoting the common welfare of all in their aggregate capacity.

We have at this time a class of human beings who discourse with considerable earnestness upon the constitutional inhibition against involuntary servitude. This class claim that their constitutional rights are invaded by the selective draft act of Congress. This is an error. Every human being owes allegiance to some nation in return for the care and protection that he has received therefrom. Allegiance is of two classes, one temporary, the other permanent. Every human being who may be temporarily domiciled within a country or state owes an allegiance to such country or state to the extent of observing the laws of the place of such domicile, but when he shall have departed therefrom such allegiance ceases.

Every human being owes a permanent allegiance to that country in which he was born until such time as his allegiance thereto shall have become extinguished by adoption as a citizen or subject of some other country.

Allegiance consists of a full and free performance of any duty for the preservation of his country even to the giving of his life in case of necessity.

The term involuntary servitude as used in the Constitution of this state and that of the United States means that slavery shall not be permitted within this state or Nation and nothing more. The state and the Nation has a right to demand the services of any citizen when the public peace or safety may require such services to be rendered. The state also has a right to fix an arbitrary compensation therefor, also to require such services without any compensation at all.

WHY IS A CAT'S TAIL?

Does it Serve a Useful Purpose, or is it Merely Ornamental?

The question having arisen, "Why does the cat have a tail?" the scientists seem willing to answer it with another question, "How would the cat look without a tail?" No one can gainsay the fact that the tail is a valuable ornament. The cat without one is a sorry sight. But there are those who maintain that the tail serves the cat as a sort of gyroscope, balancing the body in leaping, says the Popular Science Monthly.

This cannot be wholly true, for Manx cats get along very well without tails, and rabbits have no use for them at all. Yet both the Manx cats and rabbits do a lot of leaping. After all, it looks as if the tail is only an ornament unless it is a kind of safety valve for expression in exciting times.

Of course there are instances where the tail serves some purpose other than that of art. The monkey finds his useful as a sort of fifth leg; the horse uses his as a fly sweater, as does the lion; the crocodile uses his for swimming, as do the seal and the turtle and other aquatic creatures, and the rattlesnake uses his for warning enemies.

According to W. D. Matthews of the American Museum of Natural History, the tail was a necessary organ for the aquatic and amphibious ancestors from which the higher animals are descended. When they took to terrestrial life and to walking on all fours the tail became more or less superfluous.

Our city planners might well imitate the example of Buenos Aires, which every year exempts from taxation the most beautiful building erected within the preceding twelvemonth and awards a medal to the architect—Youth's Companion.
