Good Teeth Start With Infancy

GOOD teeth, well taken care of, add a charm to any face. A child with a deformed mouth enters the race of life with a big handicap. There is nothing that detracts more from a person's appearance than unsightly or irregular teeth.

Straight, even teeth—a perfectly shaped mouth—rest very largely with mother's care in infancy. Few realize the danger likely to result from allowing young children to form the habit of sucking their thumbs or fingers. This tends to force out the upper front teeth and jaw, and to push back the lower front teeth and jaw. A deformed face is the result.

This deformity causes the teeth to come in irregularly. Badly formed jaws help to cause adenoids and mouth-breathing, and normal development is retarded by displacement of the bones of the jaws and face.

Do not neglect the temporary teeth. They are the structure on which the permanent teeth are built. If lost by decay before their time, the jaws fail to expand properly, and the incoming permanent teeth will be crowded and irregular. A child's temporary teeth are not fully replaced by the permanent teeth until the teeth or twelfth year after birth.
