You Won't Let Me Starve, Will You?

I am a little Armenian girl.
 Do I look much different from an American baby girl?
 I was happy until my papa and mamma died.
 I had nice things to eat and wear, now I am growing blind because I am starving.
 I am only one of 400,000 little orphan girls and boys who are starving.
 Have you ever been really hungry?
 Many thousands of my little friends have already died from slow starvation.
 Those of us still alive can be saved even from the blindness of starvation if we can get help quickly.
 There are thousands of other little Armenian and Syrian girls and boys whose papas and mammas are living—but all of them are starving just as I am.
 Everybody here is hungry.
 Our pretty homes were destroyed and we were driven across the desert.
 My mamma carried me to the relief station.
 She gave me the last of our food and she starved to death.
 Yesterday 500 children had to be turned away when the relief workers gave us supper. Turned away to die because there was not enough food to give to all of us.
 We sleep on the ground. It is very cold, but being cold is not nearly so bad as being hungry—and being hungry is not nearly so bad as starving.
 The mothers and tiny babies all around me are starving.
 They are weak, but so patient, even when they begin to go blind.
 There are 2,000,000 of us who can yet be helped.
 Five dollars a month apiece is all we ask.
 It is enough to keep us alive, but we must be saved—Now. Today.
 We pray God every morning, noon and night asking Him to shower you with his blessings so you dear, good, kind, generous Americans can help us.
 You will help us won't you?

Lovingly yours,
 SHUSHAN ANOUSHIAN,
 J. H. PARKER, Vice President
 First National Bank.
