Soldier Letters

are generally two story. Pigs and cows live in part of the house making it a very undesirable place to live. A door opens from parlor to cow barn, very convenient I must say.

They use oxen for doing their farm work. They use the Spanish way to yoke them together. A cruel way, for instead of yoking the neck, they yoke the horns. They are the peasant class and know no better.

The French seem to think a great deal of the Americans, especially the French soldier. There is a fellowship between American and French soldiers that is born in them, no put on about it. You often see French and Americans walking together; they may not be able to talk much but you can see a friendly spirit toward each other. You can see them boxing and playing games together, fighting side by side in the trenches, and sharing sorrows, joys and cigarettes etc. They are loyal fighters, friends and comrades. The French people have ways that do not appeal to a real American but we must overlook them for they have been raised different. I would like to walk into the church for the services tonight at Ontario. I often think of the good meetings and good meetings etai etai shrdl vbqk vhb meetings, and good friends that meet there every Sunday. The little church will always be a dear place to me. It is with pleasure that I think of the good heart to heart meetings I have had a part in.

I found some fine people in McMinnville, while I was there last fall. They were very kind to me. I only spent two months there. One Friday a company that had been formed from McMinnville came home to parade on the streets. It was too much for me. I had to go to. The next morning before the sun was up I was on my way to Portland to enlist. Very few know I was going. I just disappeared. Today finds me some where in France at the front.

I am glad I enlisted. I do not want to go home until those uncivilized brutes are whipped forever and this country and America made a safe place for women and little children to live. From all reports we get, the Germans are losing now, while the allies are growing stronger.

I have met some on the boys who same over last winter. They put in a hard winter, but are in fine spirits. They are men worthy of being proud of. The Yankees are great noble fighters and do not know retreat. The Germans are finding this out. They are whipped on every side.

I would like to see my little brother and Emma. Penton's wife wrote me that John and Harold were baptized. It made me nearly cry for joy. I could see the little black-headed fellows going down into the water to me baptized. I'll be glad when I can be with them again. I feel that when I get home, if my maker sees fit that I should return, that I will be a better man and will be more able to be just what I ought to be, and set a better example for the lad.

Tell brother Blom I would be glad to get a letter from him, although I have never met him, I feel that I would like him.

I hear from Brother Baker often. He is getting along fine.

Well, good-bye for today. Best wishes to all. Write soon.

Was Seen at Rheims.

Advices from friends conveyed the news to members of the Blackaby family that William Blackaby was among a number of Americans at the famous city of Rheims. Whether he is stationed there or was merely passing thru is not known for in a letter he wrote about that time young Blackaby did not mention where he was located.

In a recent field meet in France young Blackaby took part in numerous events winning places in five of them and was awarded first place as the best all-round athlete competing. His events were the board, and high jump, pole vault and sprints.

Has Traveled Over France.

Earl Bull, who is now located at Camp Travis, Texas, wrote his relatives here this week that he had been promoted to the non-com. rank of sergeant. Since he has been in the service but a short time his friends are elated over his advancement.

Home on a Furlough.

He left Monday for the interior to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Brown, and will return to Ontario later. He expects to go to France soon after his return to camp from his furlough.

BACK FROM THE HILLS AFTER ENJOYABLE SUMMER OUTING

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Farmer returned from Jim Valley, Idaho, where Mr. Farmer has fed a band of sheep during the summer. Mrs. Farmer spent the last six weeks at the camp and came out over the trail with her husband. Mr. Farmer reported that the lambs in the band were sold at almost top prices to the Hunt sheep company and that they will be wintered on the company's new ranch near Arcadia.

Jim Valley was filled with sheep this summer, said Mr. Farmer. There were 150 bands there this season, or double that of last year. When he left the valley snow was plentiful on the hills and reached the camp many times. The change from semi-winter to mid-summer temperature made no hit with him.
