The Money Store

A money bank is a great deal like a general store in some respects. Its lines are varied. It caters to everybody and every line of business. We have something that everybody wants. We do not vary our goods in packages but we deliver them just the same. We do not order in money alone, although that is our principal stock in trade. We can render some service to everybody. Whether it is financing a large manufacturing concern or loaning $50.00 to help a man to buy a mill, we are here to deliver the goods. We urge you to come in and look over our lines. We can serve you well.

OREGON NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST

Principal Events of the Week Briefly Sketched for Information of Our Readers.

Senator McKay submitted to the War Department an offer from B. H. Wash, of Astoria, to donate to the government 100 acres of land just east of Tongue Point, near Astoria, for a site for a quartermaster's depot. The offer has been referred to the division quartermaster's office at San Francisco.

A highway map of Oregon, declared by State Highway Engineer Sams to be the best ever published in the state, has been prepared by the state highway commission. It shows all possible highways, important cities and towns and is drawn according to exact scale so that distances can be determined accurately.

A restriction of 2 cent a bushel on bread has been ordered by W. E. Kent, state food administrator, upon advice from the baking division of the food administration at Washington. The restriction is ordered as a result of an investigation by the division on bread-baking cost and wholesale and retail prices of bread.

Three serious forest fires were reported during the past week. One of the most serious fires was burning on the Western Co. property on Young's clear where camp 7 of the spruce division was destroyed. Another fire was in the Knappa district, and the third in the Neomation district, south of Seaside.

The war is making such demands upon the available supply of high school teachers that J. A. Churchill, superintendent of public instruction, announced that next June he will inaugurate a war certificate to supplement the regular certificate for teachers who do not come up to requirements heretofore prescribed for teachers in standard high schools.

Because Pacific coast oil producers are required to furnish oil for airplanes, the cutting down the specific gravity to a point below that required under the Oregon law, Deputy Solicitor of War and Resources Warrenton has instructed all deputy solicitors not to prosecute dealers who sell gasoline not passing the specific gravity test. Secretary of State Clark has replied a meeting of the state emergency board for Wednesday, October 9, to consider the deficiency needs of the state institutions. The board of control has asked that the meeting be called and a request has also been made by Dr. E. E. Lee Fisher, superintendent of the state hospital for the insane, where the deficiency will amount to $10,000.

The first headless eye ever known has been produced by Robert Whitecombe, son of Governor Whitecombe, Dr. Whitecombe, who is in charge of the eastern Oregon Agricultural college experiment station at Coquille, has worked for 12 years trying to produce a variety of headless eye and at last it appears that he has succeeded.

Because of the death of Justice Frank A. Stone, of the supreme court, Secretary of State Clark issued a supplementary certificate to certify a clerk, directing them to issue, if the notice of office to be filed at the general election on November 5, a line to read as follows: "The justice of the supreme court, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Frank A. Stone."

Today in government orders as to shipping to combat a gross condition of competition among grain producers of the Willamette valley. The season's grain crop, estimated at 60,000,000 pounds, has been practically commandeered by the government. The competition in the marketplace is causing a delay in the packing of the remainder of the crop, all of which may come great loss.

Although less than six weeks only is lacking in completion of the concrete work, it is likely that the big $40,000 concrete bridge being erected across Hood River jointly by the county and State Highway commission will not be open for traffic this year. The new bridge will require a 70-foot fill, eight feet deep, and it seems to be a question at present as to where the funds for the fill will come from.

On behalf of the government, Bert E. Hines, United States district attorney, has instituted in federal court the first suit in Oregon for condemnation of timber owned by the Spruce Production corporation for war purposes. The action is against the Coos Bay Lumber & Coal company, a Wisconsin corporation, and involves 1000 acres of spruce and cedar timber in Coos county. The government takes up this action because the Coos Bay company declined to sell its stumpage at the fixed price, and demanded $2 per thousand more.

The Oregon Highway commission has made a final decision on the north and south route via Fort Klammath in Wood River valley to be a part of the central Oregon highway on which state funds will be used in construction. The commission adopted resolutions instructing the engineer to petition the government to co-operate with the state and Klammath and Lake counties on the road between Klammath Falls and Lakeview as a portal road. The decision of the commission on the northern route settles an extended controversy between residents of the Wood River valley and neighboring residents in the neighborhood of Chiloquin.

The old Klondike coal mine at Searsville near Marshfield in Coos county was opened for the first time in 25 years and 200,000 tons of coal was mined with in the tunnel. The output will go to the government for fuel in engines used in hauling logs from the Searsville tract of spruce.

A building that comparable to that of the Vancouver cut-up mill has been accomplished at Marshfield with the completion of a bridge 1500 feet long in seven days with a force of 225 men and laborers. This bridge is part of a spur to a railroad being built to the Searsville tract of spruce.

Farmers will be allowed to erect new buildings on their premises, providing the structures do not exceed a cost of $5000 and are essential. This is an amendment to a previous order of the War Industries board that only buildings built under the auspices of the Emergency Fleet corporation, the army or navy or the railroads would be permitted. Alterations or additions to buildings already constructed are still allowed, providing they do not exceed the maximum of $2500 cost.
