DECEIT WILL ALWAYS OUT

Impossible for Any Man to Conceal His Real Self for Appreciable Length of Time.

The tag often affixed to the name of a public character is that "in private life" he or she is this or that.

How many of us behind the scenes of the world's stage are all that we face the world with?

An Irish comedian, suffering acutely from shell shock, made his rebellious body obey his spirit, to give entertainment to soldiers at the front in a play he wrote and managed, in which he assumed the chief part.

Twice during the evening they found him outside the shed, crying as though his heart would break.

Each time he gathered himself together and went back to his appointed task of bringing good cheer to the rest.

This kind of dissembling is only to be praised. There is another sort that is not laudable.

"Throwing a front" gets a man just so far and no farther. The deception is pierced before long. The manner of man he truly is comes to be known by the company he keeps, by the chance word he lets fall, by the look in his face when he is off his guard.

Happiness comes to crown the life of the man who is the same, essentially, at all times and in all places. He is not acting a part. He is always his own genuine, human self, and he does not know how to be anybody else. His private conduct and his public deeds do not need to be reconciled, for all his life is an open book that needs no apology or explanation.

"Nice" Once Meant "Foolish." Words that have undergone a remarkable change of meaning with the passage of the centuries are "pretty" and "nice." Both these words meant originally almost exactly the reverse of their present definitions. "Pretty" comes from the old French word proud or "prud." In old Saxon the word became "prut"—magnificent, splendid, vain, insolent. From this came "pritt" or "prittie," meaning almost the same; till at length it came to signify handsome, bold or fine; finally, after many gradations, reaching its present usual sense as a personal adjective of girlish and effeminate significance. "Nice"—which comes from a French source—at first meant foolish, absurd, ridiculous; then in course of time it came to signify wanton, whimsical, fantastic; then delicate and subtle, till finally it was used to denote any specially pleasant quality.

WILLIAM BLACKBAY PASSES THRU CITY ENROUTE WEST

Totally surprising his relatives and friends William Blackbay passed thru Ontario last night enroute to Camp Lewis where he expects to be discharged from the service soon. He did not advise his relatives here of his coming and they were told of his presence in the city for a few moments by Mrs. J. W. McCulloch who was at the station to put her daughter Ruth on the train. There was a surprised family when they were told by Mrs. McCulloch of her visit with the young man.

Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Aiken entertained at bridge last Saturday evening at their home on Indiana avenue. Three tables were played and J. R. Rasmussen won the high score. The guests were: Messrs and Mesdames Langley Brookes of Nyssa, Ivan E. Oakes, P. J. Gallagher, H. R. Douglass, and J. R. Rasmussen.

W. W. WOOD ELECTED DIRECTOR OF SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 8

Only a half dozen voters took time to go to the High School building Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock to participate in the election of a member for the board of education and a school board clerk. Those who were present elected W. W. Wood to the directorship made vacant by the expiration of the term of J. W. McCulloch, who declined re-election. W. L. Turner who has been clerk of the board for the past year was re-elected.

Mr. McCulloch, the retiring director has served in that capacity for six years, the longest service of any director in recent years. The school board as now composed is Dr. W. J. Weese, L. Adam and W.

W. Wood. The new board expects to organize immediately upon the return of Mr. Adam from Payette Lakes, and will according to custom probably elect Dr. Weese as chairman, he being the senior member of the board.

To visit his old home in Missouri and there to enjoy his vacation amid the scenes of his boyhood W. F. Hoeman left Sunday morning. No doubt he will return cocked and primed with a lot of new arguments for the league of nations and sundry subjects of democratic debate, with which to regale his republican friends. When he left he was certain that he would have a big time.

Watch The Enemies Lines

This is a close up view of an American observation officer in the basket of an observation balloon behind the lines in France. In the recruiting campaign which the army is engaged in now many of the men will be assigned to this interesting service. It is open to men who can qualify. This service appeals to the spirit of adventure in the American man and is one of the most popular branches of the service. Enlistment in this or any branch of the service can be made at the recruiting office in Portland or in Boise.
