Better Save than Beg or Borrow After the Revolution, when questions of National finance were uppermost in the minds of all who desired the prosperity and success of the new government, Benjamin Franklin remarked: "A small increase in industry in every American male and female with a small diminution of luxury, would produce a sum far superior to all we can hope to beg or borrow from all our friends in Europe." This observation of Franklin has its application to the building of a home. A little more industry, a little denial of luxuries, and one might add a little foresight, will combine to make home ownership a reality. One of the strongest inducements to the habit of saving is having in mind all the time a definite purpose; and of all the definite purposes one might have, none is more worthy, none sounder economically and none more promotive of happiness and security than the building of a home. The man who today saves for buying a home does so because he can look a little farther into the future than the man who goes on spending all his earnings while living in a rented house, and leaves the "future to take care of itself." He lacks the imagination to project himself into the future ten, fifteen or twenty years, to a period of his life when ownership of a home would afford him the peace and comfort that no other possession can give.
