Government Experts at Work. When a cotton shortage was threatened before the armistice, the forest products laboratory of the forest service, United States department of agriculture, entered a practically new field of investigation—finding the practicality of using wood pulp as a source of explosives. Methods for the production of acid and sulphate pulp suitable for nitrating were developed, and tests at a government arsenal proved conclusively their suitability for nitration purposes. These results have other applications, particularly in the manufacture of lacquers and pyroxylin products, and the laboratory is continuing its work along these lines.
