

STATE MANUFACTURERS UNITED IN CAMPAIGN

Effort to Inform Oregonians of Home Made Goods Gathers Impetus Thru Bureau's Activity.

Portland, Ore., Dec. 16.—Two years and a half ago 50 enterprising business men organized to promote the marketing of Oregon-made goods. Today there are 250 Oregon manufacturers who are interested in the organization known as the Associated Industries.

"Many people do not understand the purpose of the Associated Industries," said A. G. Clark, manager of the organization, this morning at his headquarters in the Oregon building. "Some think we are discriminating against industries outside of Portland. We are not. Our membership could not have grown as it has within the last two years if this were true. We are anxious to encompass all Oregon industries in our organization."

"In our campaign to educate the people of Oregon to take a greater interest in home production, we have received the hearty co-operation of the press of the state and every aggressive organization of business men, and some individual concerns. I have spoken before nearly every state, county and municipal organization and have everywhere received generous response, the sincerity of which is shown by the increasing demand for Oregon made goods."

"The labor problem in Oregon would be completely solved if all the people of Oregon would buy one-half of their purchases from Oregon producers, or in inverse proportion if one-half the people would buy all their goods from home manufacturers."

"Politics or the labor problems do not enter into the policy of the organization. We are simply trying to enlarge the payroll of the state and give each separate community its share of state wide prosperity."

"The resources of the state are as yet untouched, and it only remains for the business men of every community to get together and boost Oregon products until we have one of the biggest producing states in the Union."

ARGUS TO HAVE REGULAR UNIVERSITY CORRESPONDENT

In the classes of Journalism and news writing at the State University there is a young lady named Ramona E. Milligan, who in a letter to The Argus this week informed this paper that she had been assigned the task of sending news stories of Malheur county students to us. And this is the first of the series of news stories from the university which Miss Milligan has submitted:

Students Launch Campaign

The students of the University of Oregon are launching a campaign to raise $30,000 during Christmas vacation for funds to complete the Woman's building. At the final assembly of the fall term general plans were discussed by President Campbell, Dean Fox, Dean Straub and the general chairman, Wilbur Carl, of Portland. Lindsay McArthur of Baker, and Harris Ellsworth of Cascade Locks, have charge of the campaign in eastern Oregon and held a mass meeting Thursday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. hut for all students hailing from east of the Cascades. Each student is asked to bring with him to the University after Christmas vacation a minimum contribution of $20 toward the fund. This does not necessarily have to be a personal contribution, but can be obtained from friends and relatives.

Walter Norvell Thompson of Nyasa is cast for the part of Tom Pinch in Dickens' comedy, "Martin Chuzzlewit," which is to be presented by the Dramatic Art Class of the University of Oregon at the Eugene theatre sometime in the near future. The performance set for Friday evening being postponed on account of the snow storm.
