The Economy of Using the Best

One of the first problems confronting you in construction is the proper materials to use. Cheap materials are in the end more expensive than highgrade items.

Where poor construction deteriorates with age and fails to withstand severe weather, properly selected materials meet these tests and give full value.

In choosing your building essentials let us lend you a helping hand. Come to the Boise Payette yard and tell us your needs. You'll find us ready and able to give you advice regarding your problems and help you solve them.

a Racing Sulky

VOU can do a lot of things with a Pao Two-Way Success Plow that you can't do with any other kind of a plow.

When plowing on a hillside you drive back and forth, first with the right-hand, then with the left-hand plow, turning all the furrows down the hill. This also gives the horses a chance to walk in the plowed furrow and on the unplowed ground alternately, thus easing up on the horses.

You Can Back Up This Plow

Then when you want to get into the corners and along the edges of the field you can elevate both bottoms, turn the plow around in its own tracks like a racing sulky, back the plow into corners and other places that are inaccessible to an ordinary plow.

This method of always turning the furrows the same way avoids all dead furrows, no small advantage in some places. And it is a plow easily operated—the team performs the work of raising the bottoms, making it a horse-lift plow. It has all the earmarks of good workmanship that you expect to find on a plow bearing a Pao trademark.
