In Building a Home OR A CHICKEN COOP WE CAN HELP YOU

We have found that if we can save a man money on a bill of lumber, it usually brings him back next time he wants to buy building materials. We have found that it pays to look after our customers' interests just as carefully as we look after our own.

That's why we are anxious to discuss your building problems with you at any time. That's why we place at your service our Architectural Department to draw plans and specifications for any improvements you wish to make. We make it our business to see that you get face value for every dollar you spend in building. We consider that part of our job.

A Money-Saving Tip

You are losing money on your automobile if it isn't properly protected from the weather. The depreciation on your car in a single season, if it is not taken care of, will more than pay for a garage. Let us furnish you with blue prints and simple instructions for building an inexpensive garage for your car now.

MIX AND HORSE CRASH FROM ROOF TO CELLAR

Action is the keynote of every Tom Mix production—the kind of action in which he is at home and of which he is master—the kind that thrills and treads and pulses from A to End. Two pictures produced within a few months at the West Coast studios of Fox Film Corporation—"The Speed Maniac" and "The Feud"—have set a superb record for hair-raising stunts.

Now comes a new production with a climax that overshadows all of his former achievements. This is "The Cyclone," which William Fox presents at the Dreamland Theatre. The story is brimful of impressive situations. The cop-puncher star takes the part of a Sergeant in the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police and must surpass himself in feats of agility and horsemanship in the sacred cause of love and honor.

The climax is one of the most sensational stunt spectacles ever screened. Perhaps no other actor ever has attempted such a feat, and there was some doubt if even Mix could do it. But he secured the evident danger. The recklessness of the "man who never takes" reaches a high-water mark here. After a series of exhausting experiences Mix, on his favorite horse, gallops up three flights of stairs, landing on the roof of the house. The roof gives way under the great weight, and horse and rider crash through successive floors into the basement, where a terrible fight ensues. The effect is stupendous.

"ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE"

Thousands upon thousands of persons have thrilled to the gripping story of Jimmy Valentine, gentleman and master-crackman. Handsome and reckless Jimmy—tender with women and altogether splendid save for his penchant for safe-breaking. With nerves of chilled steel, his ginger-tips sandpapered until the raw, bleeding nerves fairly throb with the silent fall of tumbblers in vault doors, he opens safes without tools or dynamite. Freed from Sing Sing and in love with a wonderful girl, he "goes straight." But ever in his wake stalks Doyle, the detective, who has sworn to "get" him and put him back behind prison bars.

Come the moment when Jimmy has to make his great decision: shall he force open a bank safe and betray himself, or shall he leave his sweetheart's little sister, who has locked herself behind the ponderous door, to perish? How he meets this crisis, and what comes of it are developed in "Alias Jimmy Valentine." Dreamland, Thursday and Friday, August 12 and 13.

CHARLES RAY SAYS—

"When you run across a person who is shy to a fault and isn't getting anywhere because he is too bashful, you'd do him a great favor if you would insult him good and proper. Say something to him that would get his 'dander up.' Don't tell him he's too much like a shrinking violet. Do that and he'll be 'love you' and it won't do any good. But call him a crook or a liar or something like that. Then if there's any real stuff in him, it will come to the surface in a flash. It may be the making of him. That's what happens to Andy Gray, the fellow I impersonate in my new picture, 'Alarm Clock Andy.' Dreamland Saturday, August 14.

MARY PICKFORD AGAIN SHINES

That Mary Pickford is the greatest artist of the screen is again demonstrated to everyone's satisfaction at the Majestic Theatre in her appearance in her second United Artists Corporation production "Suds."

Much has been written and said about Mary Pickford's artistic ability—how she can take her audience from laughter to tears and back again by the mere move of her hand and the expression of her wonderful features.

As Amanda Affleck, the little slaver in a French laundry in the slums of London, Miss Pickford is seen in an entirely different role in which she has heretofore appeared. Gone, except for occasional flashes, are the famous curls and beautiful clothes, and instead we have the scrawny, greasy faced, pug nosed frump which for quite a while is difficult to recognize as our beautiful Mary. This above anything else proves she is an artist, for very few of our women of the films would sacrifice beauty, youth and cloths in order to give an artistic performance—but all this has Mary done, and more. But with her deft handling she makes this little nonentity of life a living, breathing person—a type you have all seen but which you never cared to remember.

When Amanda tells the other girls in the laundry of her imaginary real station in life and describes scenes in her father's castle where Horace her imaginary lover actually and figuratively proves his devotion she had us screaming with laughter—and again, when the same little figure actually meets the lover of her dreams and realizes that he would be ashamed to be seen with her in public, her audience was weeping copious tears.

Never has a finer piece of character work been done than Miss Pickford's production of "Suds." Were she a man, the laurels of Theodore Roberts, Tully Marshall and other famous character delineators would be torn from them and placed upon the brow of the world's sweetheart.

Miss Pickford is surrounded by an especially well selected cast and the street scenes in the London slums and interior settings are most lavishly built, and accurate as to detail. In fact one is typically transported to the throbbing heart of the English metropolis.

Credit for the direction is given to Jack Dillon and Charles Rosher is responsible for the photography.

This production will remain at the Majestic for 2 days starting Sunday, August 15 and all the admirers of Miss Pickford are urged to see it, and those few who assert that beauty is the lone requisite for screen success are urged to go and see what real artistic acting is.

Turn your second hand machinery into cash—your neighbor might want just what you don't need—let the Argus Want Ads carry the message to him.
