CLOSING SESSIONS OF FARM WEEK POPULAR

tension Specialist in Marketing gave what many declared to be the best lecture of the entire course. His subject was the "Underlying Principles of Cooperative Organizations." The whole matter was handled in such a clear and positive manner, well illustrated by blackboard diagrams, that no one could fail to grasp the essentials to the success of any attempt at forming cooperative marketing organizations and it is safe to say that few, if any, of his hearers went away without having acquired a new viewpoint in the matter. Mr. Mehl continued his discussion in the afternoon and, after reviewing the principles of such movements, proceeded to analyze various cooperative organizations now doing business in the State and to explain various things in connection with them. One theme in particular ran all through his discussion that was the three essentials for success, VOLUME OF BUSINESS, ADEQUATE FINANCES and EFFICIENT MANAGEMENT. Mr. Gunn closed the day with a talk on the value of cost of production surveys in determining the feasibility of developing marketing machinery for special products.

The last day of the week was devoted to the subject of poultry. Mr. Graham Park of Ontario started the program with a very splendid account of his operations in a small way with laying hens. He found it so profitable as a side line that he intends to make this his business from now on. H. E. Cosby, Poultry specialist from the O. A. C. gave a lecture on the incubation and care of baby chicks, and Mr. Archie Larson of Weiser gave a very highly appreciated account of his experience in building up his large poultry plant where he is doing great work in improving his strain of chickens as well as conducting a profitable business with laying hens. In the afternoon, Mr. Brewster, formerly poultry specialist of the O. A. C. gave a short talk on the poultry business and was followed by U. G. Upson, manager of the Pacific Poultry Producers cooperative marketing association, who gave his listeners a splendid account of the experiences of the poultrymen of the Pacific coast in marketing their products and the progress and success of the new marketing organization. This organization now handles a vast amount of business and has a large membership in Oregon and Washington. Many of the poultrymen of this section expressed a desire to join in when conditions are favorable for extending the organization to this territory. The concluding lecture was given by Prof. Cosby on the subject of "Care, Feeding and Management of Poultry." Professor Cosby proved himself a master of his specialty and gave a vast amount of useful information. The attendance during poultry day was exceptionally good, the hall being filled through the day.

In a letter to the Argus this week Walter M. Glenn, brand inspector for the Oregon Cattle and Horse Raisers association at Seattle says that Mrs. Glenn and son, Wesley will leave to visit in Ontario soon after school closes in that city, and he adds that personally he hopes to see many Stockmen at Canyon City May 25 and 26. Mr. Glenn adds that all of the family are enjoying good health this winter.

APPROVES SHORT COURSE MARKET MIGHT IMPROVE

To the Editor of the Argus:
The Short Course School conducted by the Farm Bureau last week was the best attended of any ever held in the county and many timely subjects were discussed. But we believe one important one was overlooked.

The prune growers of the Willamette valley are loaded with prunes without a profitable market, just as the hay growers of this county are situated with their hay. By reference to the market quotations we find prunes retailing in Portland at ten cents a pound, while the price demanded in the Ontario stores is twenty-five cent a pound. On the other hand we find the quotation on alfalfa in Portland, wholesale, is nineteen dollars, while around Ontario it is much less.

Is this a case of misdirected effort? Why does not the Willamette valley farmer raise alfalfa and the Malheur county man devote his attention to the prunes? Surely there is some profit in raising prunes, when the selling price is twenty-five cents a pound under present conditions.
