Traveler Tells of Rats Who Used Their Tails as Fishlines to Catch Crabs.

Captain Moncton in his "Experiences of a New Guinea Resident Magistrate," relates the following incident: "Having landed on an utterly barren island formed of coral rock and destitute of all vegetation, he found it to be the home of an enormous number of rats. There was no trace of other animal life, and it was impossible to imagine how, except by continual preying upon one another, it was possible for these rats to subsist."

"While seated at the water's edge, turning over the problem in his mind, he noticed some of the rats going down to the edge of the reef—lank, hungry-looking creatures they were, with pink, naked tails. He stopped on the point of throwing lumps of coral at them, out of curiosity to see what they meant to do. His curiosity was soon gratified. Rat after rat picked a flattish place and, squatting on the edge, dangled its tail in the water."

"Presently one rat gave a violent leap of a yard, landing well clear of the water, and with a crab clinging to its tail. Turning around, the rat grabbed the crab and devoured it, and then returned to the stone. Other rats were seen repeating the performance."

Health Insurance for Your Stock

Buildings are as necessary for the comfort and health of stock and poultry as they are for human beings.

TAKE CHICKENS, FOR INSTANCE

Put them in a cozy, sheltering henhouse and they will give you plenty of eggs. But let them get too much cold and they become sickly and lay off on the laying.

GOOD INVESTMENT

Inexpensive buildings, sheds and additions are the best investment you can made on a farm at this time of year.

Our sales manager wants to talk this over with you and tell you about B. P. service—over and above the materials to build with.
