TILE DRAINAGE EXPLAINED

Results of investigations on spacing, depth and capacity of drain tile, with other useful information on putting in tiling systems on Oregon wet lands, are ready for the farmer who has wet tracts to be drained. The results are published in experiment station bulletin No. 174, Farm Drainage, ready for free distribution. "Much of the wet lands is near transportation and has long growing seasons, drainage being the only factor lacking to make it productive and profitable," says W. L. Powers, chief of soils at the college and joint author with Ward Cretcher of the bulletin. "With the present reduced cost of materials and the surplus of labor this is the most favorable time to install drainage. Land owners who put in tiling this year are adding permanent improvements to their property while at the same time providing needed employment." The run-off data on four typical Oregon streams is of value to drainage and highway engineers.

ANTHRACNOSE SPRAY DUE

Orchardists who have not sprayed for anthracnose should do so at once. When spraying is done thoroughly so that every twig is covered little infection will result. Use Bordeaux mixture 4-4-50. To make this dissolve 4 pounds copper sulfate in water and slake 4 pounds of quick lime. Dilute one solution in the spray tank and then add the other and fill up to 50 gallons. When a large quantity is needed make up a stock solution and dilute as needed. Full direction for mixing Bordeaux can be had free of charge by writing to the department of horticulture, O. A. C. Experiment Station.

SIDEWALKS

The appearance of Ontario as a city is injured by the lack of sidewalks, good durable Concrete sidewalks. The value of many good pieces of property is lessened because there are no walks in front of them.

Is This Not True?

The only manner in which this condition can be remedied is to have the needed walks built. There is no need for delay on account of high prices. Concrete walks last for many, many years, they have not increased in cost as have other materials. They last longer and are cheaper and better than board walks.
