HENS THAT LAY BRING COTTAGE GROVE CASH

Lane-County Community Prospering Due to Wealth Produced From Its Diversified Ranches—Poultry Is Principal Factor

Cottage Grove, in Lane county is one of the towns in Oregon which is not experiencing hard times. In fact they do not know that there is such a thing as a slump in business over there for every month in the year wealth comes to the community, says Elbert Bede, president of the Oregon State Editorial association and editor of the Cottage Grove Sentinel who was in Ontario last Friday and Saturday.

Mr. Bede is making a trip over the entire state visiting with the old members and securing new members to the association and has thus had an excellent opportunity to judge the business prosperity of various sections.

"While we have, of course, heard a great deal about the shrinkage in business and of reduced credits and all that sort of thing," said Mr. Bede, "it is all newspaper talk, so far as our community is concerned. We are not having hard times.

"This may sound strange, but there is a reason, or many reasons. These reasons are chickens that lay eggs. We used to go in for fancy chickens years ago, and had a poultry show where fine roosters were the principal attraction. Now the hens that lay have replaced the roosters that crow and Cottage Grove is profiting thereby.

"I do not know exactly how many chickens are kept by the ranchers about our city, though I understand that there are almost 500,000. Anyway there is one rancher who this year shipped from his place 300,000 baby chicks at about 20 each. There are many ranchers who keep as high as 2,000 chickens on their place, while there are hundreds who have more than one or two hundred each.

"One firm alone, of which I have knowledge, pays out monthly over $5,000 for eggs. Then there are several other firms buying eggs there and many of the poultrymen belong to the Poultry Association, so that there is a great deal more than double that amount paid to the poultry raisers of the community every month.

"Many of the poultry raisers are also dairymen. We have sufficient cream for one creamery which operates there and ship enough to keep another creamery going.

Blind Man Makes Living
"An idea of what poultry raising means to us, there is a blind man who has a ten acre tract on which he keeps about 200 chickens. From these chickens he earns enough for a good living for himself and wife.

"All this wealth which comes to Cottage Grove annually could be more than duplicated around Ontario. We have not as much agricultural land as you have here. Much of our land is hilly and rough. There are no broad stretches of fine land such as I see here.

"Of course it takes time to develop the poultry business. It has grown gradually at Cottage Grove for the past eight years, and is still growing."

WITH SUBS IN BACK FIELD ONTARIO WINS

ten yard line. Riggs carried the ball in five yards and on the next play Secoy made a 45 yard run, and the danger of a Vale score ended.

Ontario's last score was made on another double pass to Sullivan who ran through a broken field for the last touchdown, and again kicked a goal making the score 20 to 0.

Twice during the game Vale recovered fumbles and the runner had a clear field before him. On both occasions Clement called the runner from behind and saved a score.

The game was marred by injuries to Ontario players. Shea, the fleet footed half, who was starting for Ontario during the first quarter carrying the ball on for successive plays for yardage was injured and taken from the game. Kanyid his running mate at half who started the game with a sprained ankle was likewise taken out, while Montie Dunton was hurt twice but remained in after he had replaced Zimmerman in the second quarter. Poorman played at both fullback and tackle in the shifting of players due to substitutions, and McCreight replaced Hale at end, while Thayer, Sanford and Weaver were substituted in the back field.

On the last score made by Ontario a number of the Vale spectators claimed that Sullivan went outside the lines, which however were not marked according to regulations and the officials could not rule on the claim and allowed the score.

L. L. Culbertson alternated with H. Tamblin as referee and umpire, Harry Chapman was head linesman, V. T. Herrett and J. M. McDonald were the time keepers. A large crowd from both Ontario and Vale witnessed the game. Between halves the Vale high rooters amused the crowd with a serpentine and a mock funeral in which they represented themselves as mourners for "Ontario Pep." The line up of the teams was:

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH MALHEUR COUNTY

Better Than California

"It is apparent that there is something wrong here. This Snake river valley from a production standpoint is unsurpassed in the west. It is a greater producer, naturally than even the famous Imperial valley of California of which so much is said. Here you can raise 7 tons of alfalfa at three cuttings, there it requires five cuttings. See the difference in cost of getting in the crop? Yet this is undeveloped, while the Imperial valley is intensely developed.

"There is no encouragement for outside capital to develop this region when taxes are as high as they are here. There must be a change. There must be more people here to develop the possibilities of this region.

"What is true of Malheur county may generally be said to be true of Oregon. It is startling, yet it should be apparent to anyone, that when you reach Oregon from the South development ceases at the California line; when you approach Oregon from the North, almost as great a difference in development is noted; while it is even more apparent when you approach Oregon from the East here at Ontario and Nyssa.

"This Snake river valley is a perfect example. On the East side of the river the country supports, Weiser, Payette, Fruitland, Parma, Caldwell and Nampa. On the West side it has Ontario and Nyssa only. There must be a cause for this condition and until that cause is removed it is useless to look for development in this section.

"Our company has spent $100,000 in development in this section, that is about the Nyssa ranches beside the work we have done in fencing the range in the upper end of the county in an effort to bring back the range grass and make our holdings valuable and secure a return from them. The result is apparent even in one year. The grass has grown until in sections it looks like a field of grain. That is a constructive effort to conserve the resources of this section and aid in re-establishing the live stock industry. Yet we have not been able to keep these fences from being cut whenever any individual desired to do so."

In answering Mr. Martin's query as to "What is the matter with Malheur County and Oregon," the editor of the Argus directed his attention to the fact that it was the owners of the big land grants who opposed the construction of the original Malheur project, and that the presence of large land holdings, absent ownership and the concea-tration on the stock cattle business to the exclusion of the diversified farming to a degree at least must be blamed. Further than that this section of the state, and in fact all Oregon has, apparently lacked the great essentials, leadership and co-operation.

We agree that Mr. Martin is right. Development apparently stops with the Oregon line on every side. Mr. Martin's statement is really a challenge to Oregon. To the men of Malheur county in particular. But it must also be considered that so long as the land of the county is in large blocks that development cannot be achieved. One of the first steps toward development and progress in this or any other section will come when the man on the farm owns his land and is personally interested in its progress.

Poetic Business Man Got Something of a "Jolt" When He Tackled Little Waitress.

The man with the superior air was a poetic business man. He generally patronized a small lunchroom near his office. When he was not selling eggs at wholesale or something, he liked to read verse. His favorite was Tennyson's "Idylls of the King." And because he felt that he knew so much about it he thought he would have a little fun with the lunchroom waitresses, in a superior sort of way.

It began by naming the girls after the heroines in the poem. His regular waitress was a tall, gaunt person, but somewhat queenly as she bore down on him with a plate of hash. Her real name was Sadie.

"Sadie," he announced one night, "hereafter I'm going to call you Guinevere. Mind?"

"I should worry," said the waitress, shifting her gum, "but who's she?"

"The bride of King Arthur," was the reply.

"Aw, but I hope she's respectable. I ain't seen that film."

So it went. All the girls were properly renamed. And then one day a new waitress was on the job. She was small and dark. Exceedingly pretty, he thought.

"I haven't named you yet," he told her after a couple of nights.

Then he explained his little indoor sport.

"I'll let you be Elaine," he said.

"How ridiculous," she answered. "I can't be Elaine."

"Why not?"

"Tennyson says she was fair. I'm a brunette. Elaine the fair, Elaine the beautiful, Elaine the lily maid of Astolat." Evidently you don't remember how the lines went.

Childish Imagination.

"It is difficult to learn to know child nature, since it is continually in the act of becoming different," says V. Rasmussen in his work on child psychology. This remark applies to the development in the first four years of child life. The author is emphatic in his opinion that little children should, as far as possible, be allowed to follow their own way. Don't distract their attention unnecessarily, he says; rather come to their aid when they are particularly attracted to any one thing. Let them develop their imagination in their own kind of way.

It might be natural to think that the child's imagination is most healthily and powerfully developed if it is fed from an early age with tales of wonder and fantastic adventure. But this is a misunderstanding, says Mr. Rasmussen.

Road Construction in China.
The central government of China is evincing considerable interest in road building, and the ministry of the interior, which has charge of highway projects in conjunction with provincial officials, is said to have prepared a bill concerning highway development for presentation to the new parliament, which is expected to meet in Peking at an early date. Considerable road construction is being conducted in connection with the famine relief work whereby the recipients of relief are enabled to render compensation for the food furnished them and thus contribute to the permanent betterment of China's transportation facilities, which will tend to minimize such catastrophes in the future.—Scientific American tance and the game ended with the ball in the center of the field.

The play was clean throughout. The locals had the better of the play in the line while Institute back field, Madison, Hickox, Shumway and Iverson outlayed the local back-field men. For the locals Maddux, Shea and Kanyid proved the best ground gainers, save on the two occasions that the double passes to Hale and Sullivan each netted about 20 yards.

On Saturday the locals will play Payette here and since honors for last year are with Payette the locals are going to strive to wipe off the defeats experienced in 1921. Last Friday Nampa defeated Payette by an overwhelming score and thus a line on the comparative strength of the locals will be secured.
