TEIGHTWOD'S SUGGESTIONS

Writing under the non de plume of Ernest Teightwod, a correspondent in recent issues of the Oregonian has been relieving himself of sundry suggestions for the tax-excess disease which is afflicting Oregon. The latest ebullition of the Oregonian's sage observer is that, in billiard parlance, a reverse English be placed on the six per cent limitation provision of the constitution.

In other words, that instead of prohibiting the levying of any tax which will raise more than six per cent above the tax of the preceding year; the constitution be amended so that no tax could be levied unless it was say ten per cent less than the preceding year. His philosophy is that, the way to reduce is to reduce.

Undoubtedly there is some merit to this suggestion, if one believes that the men elected to office have neither character nor ability. The six per cent limitation was an evidence that the people entertained just that opinion.

But what has happened under that very statute? It has made every tax levying body raise six per cent each year because each body feared that some constituency might arise which would necessitate more taxes than previous years required. Thus some years when the total might have stood still it was almost automatically raised the constitutional limit.

The real hope for reduction in taxation lies in the improvement in the character and ability of the men elected to office. It is impossible for the public as a whole to determine just what will be needed for governmental expenses and someone must be trusted. The thing to do is to get trustworthy men. Unless this is done, even with the reverse English on the limitations law, taxes will mount, for the people will constantly be called upon to authorize increases, and the chances that the same public would approve of most of the rises.

And then, too, what encouragement is there now for capable men to run for office? The one set of governmental officials in Malheur county, the county court, which has shown a decrease in expenses during recent years, has been mostly subjected to abuse and criticism. If the public is to expect good service it should appreciate it. Public officials are human, and how can the public expect to retain men who actually work toward and achieve tax reductions, while constantly complaining?

Every reasonable suggestion for tax reduction should be given careful consideration, even greater consideration should be given to the character and ability of the men elected who are to supervise the actual expenditure of the cash which the taxpayers invest annually in government.

THE PRICE OF LIBERTY

The fight that has begun on the cost of education in Oregon cannot be considered in its true inwardness unless an agreement is first reached on the following questions: What is government? Why are governments established among men? What place has education in the scheme of government?

There are two great authorities on these questions, especially the first two. They are the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

When that great assembly of men in the Continental Congress, wise beyond their generation, declared:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.

They voiced therein truths which are now axiomatic and acknowledged where ever civilization has reached an enlightened stage of democracy.

Nor were the founders of this government satisfied with that one noble declaration of principle, but they again gave voice to such an high ideal when in the preamble of the Constitution they set forth to the world this inspiring paragraph: "We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for The United States of America."

Granted then that these are the objects for which governments are established, how then are we to consider the schools and colleges and universities of our land? What other means have we for promoting equality among our citizens? Are we to say that only the rich are to be educated? Are we to establish a hereditary class of educated citizens and say that only the rich shall have the blessings of knowledge? Would that promote equality of condition or opportunity? Would that promote domestic tranquility, and insure peace and prosperity at home? Would such a course "promote the general welfare or secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity?"

Thoughtful citizens of this land, we believe, will agree that the limitation of educational opportunities to those who could afford to pay the cost would destroy the very foundation of our government. They will agree, too, that in the promotion of happiness no substitute has been found for education, among civilized and enlightened men and women.

Those who would curtail the advantages of education are sowing to the wind and would reap the whirlwind of revolution and the destruction of our present government. We would not be understood to say that no curtailment can be secured, for undoubtedly many savings are possible and ought, at this time, be made, but no radical changes can safely be made with the fundamental plan of education as at present operative.

Whether or not it is the duty of the state to educate men and women for the professions is another question. Certainly though, the opportunity for such an education should be afforded. Perhaps it would be possible for the state to take the note of the student in the professions for a portion of the cost of his education and make the payments thereon to cover a period of years following his graduation. This would deter the thoughtless and aimless student from taking such a course and make room for the purposeful student while at the same time reducing the cost of education to the taxpayers.

SUMMER SCHOOL WILL BE HELD AT PENDLETON

Pendleton, March 21—Teachers of Eastern Oregon will be afforded the opportunity of doing work in a practice school in conjunction with the six weeks session of the summer Normal school here this summer, according to an announcement made recently by President J. S. Landers of the State Normal school of Monmouth. The session will begin June 19 and will be concluded the latter part of July.

One of the requirements which graduates of Normal schools must meet in order to secure a diploma is a certain amount of directed teaching in practice school under the criticism of skilled instructors. Heretofore, the Pendleton Normal has not offered this feature, and the decision of the state to make available to Eastern Oregon teachers the opportunity of this extra training in the Normal school in their own section of the state is expected to add to the popularity of the course.
