LOCAL PERSONALS

Frank Schultz, who is known to interior folk as an attendant at the Rust Pool parlor at Juntura, came down to Ontario this week for a short visit.

Juntura had a number of its citizens listed in Ontario during the week, among them being John O'Toole erstwhile a member of the section crew at Juntura.

Dave Logan of Erogan, made one of his periodic visits to Ontario last Tuesday.

Miss Ubrey Nash, now a resident of La Grande, but who was a native daughter of Westfall, came to Ontario to visit friends, and was a guest while here of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Madden.

County Assessor Andrew Graham was the guests of his brother and sister, Mrs. David F. Graham on Sunday.

On her way to Portland for a visit with her parents, Mrs. Archie Meyer of Ironside, passed through Ontario Saturday.

MUMMIFIED BODIES IN CAVES

Scientists Expect to Find Much of Interest Through Discoveries in South Africa.

Recently discovered mummy caves in the Koster district, west of Pretoria, South Africa, are situated in a wild country 25 miles from railways, and the entrance to them lies at the bottom of a forbidding hole in the ground 80 feet deep, for the descent of which a rope tied to a tree trunk is necessary.

Several hours spent in the caves failed to give any estimate of their size, as passages extend for long distances, possibly for miles. The work of exploration was not without danger on account of the pitch darkness, the insecure rocks, and the risk of falling into crevices.

The explorers saw in a fissure high up in a rock on the side of the cave the mummified body of a huge buck, on top of which, also wedged in the rocks, was the body of a large tiger with its jaws fiercely extended. Two members of the party attempted to get the horns of the buck, but a fall of rock compelled them to abandon the effort.

Under the bats' dung which covered the floor of the cave were found the mummified remains of a monkey measuring six feet from head to toe, in an excellent state of preservation. On the floors were a large number of bones and chipped flints, while the bats' dung looked as though it had been accumulated for centuries.

GRANT INTERCEDED FOR LEE

Writer in Detroit Newspaper Makes Public Fragment of History That Is Interesting Reading.

Immediately after the conclusion of the Civil war and the assassination of President Lincoln, Andrew Johnson, the new President, became very intent on the punishment of the South, rather than his predecessor's generous idea of treating the war as definitely an end and concentrating national effort on the rebuilding of the Union. He found many supporters in congress, and their endorsement persuaded him to contemplate a very radical course. On one occasion he meditated the arrest of General Lee.

When the news of this plan came to General Grant, he immediately waited on President Johnson and informed him that Lee had honorably surrendered, and had been assured that he could devote himself to the welfare of the South without interruption or disturbance. The Northern general continued to the effect that the army, of which he was head, intended to see that these terms were carried out, and that if Johnson attempted to interfere with Lee he would be arrested himself. This was the end of Johnson's designs on the liberty of the Southern commander.—Detroit News.

Hibernian Hyperbole.

In one of our New England summer resorts lives, during the summer, a family having four small children of assorted sizes, and several dogs. In the employ of the household is an Irish maid whose duties include keeping the living rooms of the house in order. Early in the season the streets of the village are treated to a coat of tar, a proceeding attended by much trucking about of the dogs. Nora's distress of mind, after one of these experiences, is great, for she is a cleanly soul who has the appearance of her domain much at heart. When the untidiness was at its worst one day she went in search of her mistress and complained:

"I give you me wor'd, Mrs. Brown, that fer ivery wanst the boys and thim dogs has gone out of this house this day they've come in twenty-five times!"

Made Famous Tea Shipment.

In Gracechurch lane, an obscure byway just outside one of London's busiest commercial centers, American tourists may see over a grocer's store the "sign of the crown and three gilt sugar loaves" that marks the location of the shop whence the tea was shipped in 1773 that ultimately went overboard in Boston harbor during the world's famous tea party.

Only the sign, which was recently restored and which bears in big gold numerals "1750," the year the firm was established, is suggestive of remote times.

The grocer's shop, conducted by descendants of the firm's founders, over which the sign hangs, is now housed in a modern brick building. Inside, nothing distinguishes the place from thousands of similar places of business.

The Easiest Way.

A young farmer of Clay county, who was soon to be married, was asking his older brother about such matters as getting the license and having the ceremony pronounced, when the brother asked: "Which are you going to have marry you, a preacher of the gospel or a justice of the peace?"

The prospective bridegroom hesitated. "I had a preacher of the gospel," his brother added.

The younger man thought of the caustic tongue his sister-in-law wagged.

"Yes, and you've been listening to sermons ever since," he retorted. "I guess I'll chance the peace route."—Indianapolis News.
