WHIP-POOR-WILL
 By ADDIE GRAVES

The last dainty piece of finery had been finished and carefully laid on the bed in the front room. The dressmaker's threads, rags and patterns and spools had been cleaned away, and the nerve-racking planning, fitting and hustling were over, releasing the tension of wearying weeks of confining toil. Rose had closed the door and gone down to the piazza for a breath of fresh air.

"What a relief," she sighed; "it will be so nice to have a few days of rest. All the other girls have been in a jungle of confusion up to the last minute. I think I will go over and call on Will's mother. It's fine to have a congenial mother-in-law—and Pa Parker—as he already calls himself—is such a dear. It's like having two sweethearts, he is so considerate."

Rose walked slowly up the maple-shaded road until she came to a little white cottage behind some locust trees in full bloom. It was nearly dark, with a bay moon just disappearing behind Peaked hill. How perfect everything was on a June evening, and what a lucky girl she was to be marrying the best boy that ever lived. As she turned up the path, bordered by a bed of perennials backed by shrubs and two small fir balsams, she thought she heard his voice. Glancing through an opening, she unmistakably saw Will's form—and a female figure with a hat on, tightly veiled. His voice continued: "You are graceful enough to please an artist—and your poise is perfect. We will fool them all—the ninnies! You're a darling!"

His head was very near now, while he carefully buttoned her sweater. "I'll see you again in the morning, honey; don't be afraid of the dark—"

Rose did not stop to hear more, but fled in her silent-soled sneakers down the now lonely road. A lone whip-poorwill screamed from some nearby bush:

"Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will! Whip-poor-will!"

"How absurd! Ridiculous heaped upon insult! Imagine ME whipping Will! He can never be anything to me hereafter—and I am not the breach-of-promise kind of a girl! What a fool I have been to think a boy who has known me all his life could be in love with me! Of course he needed some new personality to interest him! I am like a sister.

Rose ended her exclamations by deciding to take the nine o'clock train to the next town to visit her sister.

While dressing Rose penned a short note to drop in the post office as she passed it on the way to the train. It was very simple:

"I have discovered that you prefer someone else. Goodbye. ROSE."

Will was packing his camera when the postman arrived. He was surprised to see his address in Rose's handwriting, for he had supposed she was at home but had not been up because she was busy and tired. After reading the note he pondered with wrinkled brow.

"Rose was as happy as usual just before supper; what COULD she have imagined so soon after?"

At last his face registered the solution of the problem. His mouth widened from its tight pucker. A convulsing laugh ended in a roll on the lawn. Quickly gathering himself up, he hurried into the house, put a picture into an envelope with a note as short as Rose's.

"Dear Rose: Come home on the 8 p. m. and be introduced to your rival. Yours, WILL."

The eight o'clock train brought a very disconcerted young lady to Maple dell. Will met her at the station and tried to make the affair as little embarrassing as possible. They stopped to speak to Rose's mother, who was much astonished at her quick return. As the couple continued up the road to Will's home Mrs. Moore remarked to herself:

"I didn't suppose they were so infatuated they couldn't stay apart two days! I don't believe they will ever quarrel."

Will led Rose from the path to the spot where she had viewed her terrible revelation of the night before. The graceful young lady was there—as tightly veiled as then. Will tipped his hat with great dignity.

"Allow me to introduce my charming scarecrow. Isn't she the peachiest one you ever saw? She's gotten up over mother's dress form. She has certainly fooled all the nunny crows, robins and woodchucks; they let my peas, beans, corn and cherries alone. But I played you a terrible trick, sweetheart; what can you do to punish me?"

Suddenly a cry came from a maple close by that made Will and Rose jump into each other's arms.

"Whip-poor-Will! Whip-poor-Will! Whip-poor-Will!"

They both laughed and the whip-poorwill flew away.

Order of Odd Fellows.
 The Order of Odd Fellows, a social and benevolent society, was founded in London, England, in 1745. The Independent Order of Odd Fellows (Manchester unity) was founded in Manchester in 1813, and is one of the oldest of friendly organizations in the United Kingdom, its membership in 1920 numbering 1,077,888, and its total capital almost $90,000,000. It has branches in the United States, Canada and other parts of the world. The United Order of Odd Fellows and the National Independent order are similar friendly societies, really in effect members of the same fraternity.

CLUB NOTES

Excellent Corn Crops
 By W. D. Kinder, County Club Leader

The members of the Upper Big Bend Corn Club have an excellent corn crop this year was proven by a field trip last Thursday, when the members of the Club accompanied by their local leader, Edwin Wilson and County Club Agent, Kinder, were taken from one field to another in order that they might compare their own member's crop with that of their own. The fields visited were as follows: Chester and Lois Wilson's; Loren and Verdie Whites'; J. P. and Bobby Barretts' and Rex Wicklunds'.

L. R. Brethaupt, County Agent is going to instruct the boys and girls of the Upper and Lower Big Bend Corn Clubs next Wednesday afternoon, on how to select corn for seed and show. Both Clubs are to meet at V. Eachus, as Mr. Eachus has several different varieties of corn on his farm.

Judging Teams
 The boys of Oregon Slope and of Jefferson are forming some good judging teams. Keen competition is being displayed between the boys in each club as to who is going to represent their Club at the County Fair.

General
 The members of the various poultry clubs are working hard on their exhibit for the county fair. There will be several different varieties of chickens and ducks shown. Jefferson, Moores' Hollow and Riverdale communities are having a community fair Sept. 18, in the Annex. The different clubs of these communities will exhibit work.

Strike Not New Weapon.
 That strikes are not of recent origin, but that they have, for many centuries, troubled the employer of labor, is said to be interestingly established by a record recently discovered in certain ancient Egyptian hieroglyphic tablets. These tablets were found in the excavation of some ruins at Thebes, and cast a strong light upon the labor conditions of the city 3,000 years ago. Details are given of many interesting phases of a strike when a large number of workmen notified their employers they would discontinue work unless their back pay were promptly arranged and a new wage scale arranged.

The Way to Get Tired of Paintings.
 "I'm sick and tired of looking at that old painting. I never did like it, anyhow, and I only hung it up because it was a wedding present."
 "I know, my dear, but what shall we do with it?"
 "Why don't you give it to your club? That's what everybody else does with unwanted pictures."—Detroit Free Press.

"I knew him when he was a boy"

What one is there of us that has not felt the glow of satisfaction over the outstanding success of a life-long friend! Often a surprise — seemingly "all of a sudden." Yet neither surprising nor sudden, when you stop to think back over each step of his progress.

THE United States Rubber Company—makers of U. S. Royal Cord—were first to conceive, make and announce the balanced tire. A tire in which there is such complete unity of action in tread and carcass that neither will give way before the other.

First to conceive, make and announce a complete line of tires—a tire for every need of price and use under one standard of quality.

First to tell the public about the good and bad in tire-retailing. (You remember the phrase "Go to a legitimate dealer and get a legitimate tire.")

First also to arouse industrial and trade minds to the need of a new kind of tire competition. (Competition for better and better values. Greater and greater public confidence.)

THESE high spots along the U. S. road to leadership indicate the intent—the will to win by the quality route in a price market.

Now that so many car-owners have given their verdict for quality tires in general, and U. S. Tires in particular—a number of dealers and car-owners whose vision has been clouded by "discounts," "sales" and what not, are beginning to remember that they "knew him when he was a boy."
