Red Cross Gains Strength in All Foreign Fields

In insular possessions of the United States and in foreign lands the American Red Cross scored heavy gains during the last year, passing the previous membership high mark of 1918 by 4,201 and advancing the figure to 158,408. The Philippines take the lead, gaining nearly 100 per cent, now having 115,917 members. In Europe the 1921 Roll Call enrolled 11,125, with the Constantinople Chapter reporting 665, a gain of 33 members. China was 1,782 members, a gain of 506; the little Virgin Islands have 1,000, while the Dominican Republic with 2,927 advanced from its previous high mark by 1,423 new members. Haiti, organized in 1920, now has nearly 1,000 enrolled. Mexico reports 354, a gain of 327 in one year. The American Red Cross has spread its membership over some 70 foreign lands and its Junior membership outside of the United States is close to 700,000.

2,679 Chapters Aiding Veterans
 In this work, upon whose accomplishment the American Red Cross is urging a record-breaking enrollment in the Roll Call which opens on Armistice Day and closes with Thanksgiving Day, 2,679 Chapters in all parts of the country are engaged. This is 350 more than were working for ex-service men last year when approximately $10,000,000 was expended by the National Organization and the Chapters working together in harmonious unity.
 For the current fiscal year National Headquarters appropriated $3,030,682.90, an increase of $365,500.84 over the amount spent for the work among ex-service men in the year ended June 30 last. Since it is estimated that the Chapters will expend close to $7,000,000 from their own funds, the grand total of Red Cross expenditures for this single work is expected again to reach the $10,000,000 mark by June 30, 1923.

Hospital and District Office Work
 During the fiscal year a total of over 1,000 persons, paid and volunteer, has been engaged in Red Cross duty in hospitals or district offices of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau. An average of 8,000 new cases requires definite and particular attention each month. The demand for Chapter-made articles for hospital patients is constant.
 During last year Service Claims and Information Service at National Headquarters handled 37,200 compensation and insurance claims, 24,560 allotment and allowance cases, and 9,700 miscellaneous claims. Since February, 1919, it has disposed of 64,174 allotment checks payable to veterans which the Post Office Department reported undeliverable.
 The Chapter is the unit of the Red Cross organization which is accessible to every disabled veteran or his family. Between July 1, 1921, and June 30, 1922, the Chapters had reported 1,905,079 instances of service to ex-service men and their dependents, at a cost estimated from reports now at hand of more than $5,340,000.

The basis of this far-reaching work of the Red Cross is the individual needs of the disabled veteran to the end that he may obtain his rights under the law, that his especial wants may be immediately supplied, that his own and his family's situation may be rendered happy and cheerful, and that their outlook for the future may visualize incentives for independent and fruitful effort.
Niagara Traveling Backward.
 Niagara's total practical energy equivalent is in excess of 6,000,000 horse-power. This stream of energy is kept constantly renewed by the action of the laws of nature, and it finds expression through the medium of noise. The falling water at Niagara presents a grand spectacle which is viewed each year by less than 1 per cent of the population of the country. But this spectacle, though grand, is a traveling show, for the falls have receded 955 feet since the first survey was made in 1764.—World's Work.

RED CROSS HEALS WOUNDS OF WAR

25,000 Disabled Ex-Service Men in Hospitals After Four Years of Peace.

CHAPTERS' FIELD OF SERVICE

Every Veteran Needing Help Gets Individual Attention of Sympathetic Workers.

When on November 11 the world halts to observe the fourth anniversary of Armistice Day, and the American Red Cross inaugurates its Annual Roll Call for the enrollment of the 1923 membership, the people of the United States may well pause to think of the unparalleled contribution to the cause of peace made by our Army and Navy in the World War. The glory of it is a common tradition; but the wounds of war remain. They are not healed in a day, in a year, nor in four years. And on Armistice Day there will be under treatment in Government hospitals over 25,000 ex-service men, broken physically by wounds, exposure, nervous strain and exhaustion incident to their service in the war.
 The Government without stint is undertaking to furnish these disabled men with the compensation and medical care to which they are entitled, yet their especial care is a duty of the Red Cross. Why? Because the Government cannot handle the cases of ex-service men individually; it must handle these men in bulk under a standardized policy. The Government has neither the authority, the funds or the equipment for working out the problem of the individual man. There is where the American Red Cross finds its greatest field for service, aiding through its very active Chapters in reaching the disabled man with immediate practical help, assisting his family while his claim is emerging from the process of adjustment, furnishing articles of comfort, funds to tide over the difficult periods, the friendly touch of personal encouragement, helpful recreation and worry-dispelling amusement. It is the warm hand of sympathy and understanding which the American Red Cross extends to the majority of these disabled ex-service men, some of them friendless in the whirl of life, thousands of them with wives and children dependent upon them, and hundreds of them frequently helpless in the face of grim necessity.

She had not lost her beauty, if it had grown more mature. And there was no reason—that was it—no reason at all!
 She remembered the cynical information given her by other disillusioned married women. All men, they said, were unfaithful. But Molly had never expected it of Jim.
 She had already decided that there should be no divorce, on account of Elsie. He was fond of the child, and she would bear her burden. But why? Why? The question rose to her lips insistently.
 She knew who the other woman was—Miss Clinton, manager of an office force in a big corporation, a business woman by day, a gadabout at nights. She was well known; she had had other affairs with other men.
 Jim should never know of her discovery. Molly put back the packet of letters where she had found them. She would not let Jim know. But she meant to see this Clinton woman and, quite sincerely, ask where she herself had failed.

For those letters reflected Jim's, and breathed a passion that Jim had never felt for her.
 On the following evening, alleging an engagement, Molly made her way to Miss Clinton's apartment.
 She knew that Jim had a business appointment that night—a real one! She had ascertained that beyond doubt.
 The apartment in which Miss Clinton lived was of the press-a-button-and-walk-up kind. So Jim was not keeping her in luxury! Summoning all her courage, Molly went up to the top flat when the door opened.
 Miss Clinton was pretty, there was no denying that, and Molly felt oddly touched to see that she was quite passable like herself.
 "I'm Mrs. Protheroe," said Molly. Hostility flared into Miss Clinton's eyes. "Come to make a scene, I suppose!" she said.
 "No, just to take a look at you," said Molly.
 Miss Clinton opened the door reluctantly. "Look all you want to, then," she answered.
 "I haven't come here to quarrel with you, Miss Clinton," Molly said. "I just wanted to find out—well, you see, I know everything, and I wanted to find out what Jim sees in you that he doesn't see in me."
 The other laughed uncomfortably. "Oh, Jim and I met and found we were meant for each other. I guess that covers everything."
 "He thought that about me, perhaps."
 "Wore off, maybe."
 "Will it wear off with you?"
 "I don't know, nor care," answered Miss Clinton. "That's the beauty of it. That's what keeps us together. You fool, didn't you know that?"
 "I've never been exacting," said Molly humbly. "I've worked for him—when we were poor I slaved for him."
 The other softened. "My dear, I've never slaved for a man in my life, and never will," she said. "I guess the truth is you're the typical wife, and I'm the typical—well, you know."
 "Are all men untrue to their wives—when they've thought about them all the time?"
 "Mostly, I guess. You see, a man doesn't want a servant when he marries. He'd much rather come home to love, with a dirty icebox, or at down to wash and kisses than a housewife meal. I guess you haven't learned that, Mrs. Protheroe."
 "No, I've been a fool," said Molly.
 "Ab, well, that's the secret," Miss Clinton answered. "You can't hold love by housework."
 "I guess you're the type of woman the men go to," admitted Molly. "But—maybe I've got a secret, too."
 "What is it?"
 "They always come back—when their wives are big enough and brave enough and loving enough. And I'm the type they come back to. They do get tired of wash and dirty iceboxes—and Broadway dinners, too."
 "Maybe," answered Miss Clinton. And Molly went down the stairs, pondering the old, unanswered question:
 "Which would I really rather be?"

The Other Woman
 By MYRA C. LANE

So this was the end!
 Molly Protheroe stood looking in dumb anguish at the proofs of Jim's faithlessness. There they were, set down in black and white, the other woman's letters, proof enough for a divorce in any court of any land.
 And a dull resentment, not unmixed with curiosity, burned in her. Why had Jim done this? Why had he proved unfaithful?
 She went over in her mind the seven years of her married life with him. She had been so dutiful, so unquestioning, slaving for him, cooking, scrubbing, washing, and never taking her troubles to him when he came home at night.
 She had not lost her beauty, if it had grown more mature. And there was no reason—that was it—no reason at all!
 She remembered the cynical information given her by other disillusioned married women. All men, they said, were unfaithful. But Molly had never expected it of Jim.

 "Mostly, I guess. You see, a man doesn't want a servant when he marries. He'd much rather come home to love, with a dirty icebox, or at down to wash and kisses than a housewife meal. I guess you haven't learned that, Mrs. Protheroe."
 "No, I've been a fool," said Molly.
 "Ab, well, that's the secret," Miss Clinton answered. "You can't hold love by housework."
 "I guess you're the type of woman the men go to," admitted Molly. "But—maybe I've got a secret, too."
 "What is it?"
 "They always come back—when their wives are big enough and brave enough and loving enough. And I'm the type they come back to. They do get tired of wash and dirty iceboxes—and Broadway dinners, too."
 "Maybe," answered Miss Clinton. And Molly went down the stairs, pondering the old, unanswered question:
 "Which would I really rather be?"

France Encourages Aviation.
 France recognizes the value of air travel and its importance to the future. She has budgeted 104,578,000 francs for civilian aviation for the year 1922. Naturally, Paris is the great center of French commercial aviation, the Le Bourget airfield in the suburbs taking on the appearance of a busy railway terminal. Airplanes to and from London (five departures daily) and Brussels carry the largest number of passengers.
