

MONTHLY REPORT OF COUNTY CLUB AGENT

October, 1922. W. D. Kinder

INTRODUCTION

This report covers a period of 31 days from October 1 to 31 inclusive. Of this time 2 days were spent returning from the state fair. 8 days were spent in the field returning exhibits from both the County and State Fairs; getting in Final Reports, talking over the various projects for next year's club work; selecting, or rather, helping select corn for the Portland Land Show. Three days were spent with the judging team in preparation for the contest at the Pacific International Livestock Exposition, 9 days were spent in going to and from and attending the annual conference of Extension Workers in Corvallis.

While in the field 50 personal visits were made, 3 club meetings were held with an attendance of 19 members, 1 meeting with the executive committee of the Farm Bureau, six members present. A talk was given to the teachers present at the Malheur County Teachers' Institute. There were 150 teachers present. After the talk Mrs. W. L. Turner's Sewing club gave a demonstration in the form of a play. The girls demonstrated various things they had learned in club work during the past year. After the demonstration a time was appropriated for the teachers who were interested in Club work to confer with the county club agent. Nine days were spent in the office working on the monthly report; mailing prize ribbons and checks to the winners at the county and state fair; checking final reports for the annual reports. While in the office 77 personal letters were written; 1 circular letter of 200 copies mailed, 8 telephone calls answered, 2 articles for the press written, 1 questionnaire answered and 3 office calls attended to. The time this month was spent on two projects mainly, corn and stock judging. The other projects were visited but as most of them have completed their work for the past year the time was spent where it was most needed.

"Tickets, please."
Dorothy Martin roused herself from her book sufficiently to put her hand into her coat pocket. But—her purse wasn't there! She reached into the pocket on the other side. Then she looked up at the conductor in dismaying a grim, sour-looking old man who looked as if he would make allowances for no one.

"But I'm sure my purse was in my pocket when I boarded the train. It must be here."

While he waited she searched frantically on the seat, under the seat, in her traveling bag, in her hat box. Then, flushed and breathless, she looked up. "I'm sorry—I can give you a check. And here's my personal card."

"Sorry. We don't take no checks, miss."

"What can I do?"

"You'll have to get off at the next stop—St. Michael—a hundred miles further on. And I'll have to ask you to go into the coach."

It was a flushed and indignant young woman who gathered up her baggage and followed the conductor into the hot, stuffy coach.

About midway she found herself on the station platform, her patent leather luggage beside her.

"Porter, miss?"

But she had no money with which to pay for such a luxury, so, much to his disgust, she struggled into the ticket office, up to the window, and asked for a telegraph blank.

"Lost purse. Telegraph one hundred to me at St. Michael, Dorothy."

"Yes, it can go collect. Wait a minute."

To the astonishment of the waiting clerk, she tore the telegram into small pieces. "I've changed my mind." And she strode across the room to the lunch counter.

"Is that job filled?" pointing eagerly to a sign, "Waitress Wanted," before the cashier's window.

The woman looked up, took in at a single glance every detail in the appearance of the slim, aristocratic-looking girl standing before her. "No'm, it ain't."

"I want it."

"Joe, Joe," called the woman in a high, nasal voice. "This gal wants yer job. She don't look like much, but maybe she'll be better'n nothing."

Before Dorothy was aware of what had happened, she was behind the counter, serving the hungry hordes who had ridden with her to St. Michael and who were clamoring deafeningly for eggs, sandwiches, custard pie and coffee as if they hadn't consumed basketfuls of food in the preceding three hours.

St. Michael was an ugly, sprawling settlement of about twenty frame houses—dirty, weather-beaten, desolate.

One week rolled by, two. In two more weeks Dorothy would have saved enough to get home.

She had just lifted a huge, steaming kettle of soup to the table in her corner of the counter when the Burlington train roared in. Hardly had its brakes brought it to a standstill when a throng of men burst through the doors. The women and children always straggled in and tried to push through the men three-deep at the counter. As she reached for a cup, a familiar voice rang out, "Dorothy." A tall young man was pushing toward the counter.

"I think you are mistaken, sir."

"Dorothy!"

"Move on there, young fellow. You can't be annoying my girls. Move on."

"But—"

"Move on, didn't I tell you?" It was Joe, and he was advancing threateningly upon the young man.

"Oh, Dick"—then her voice broke.

"No, no, Joe; he knows me; it's all right. I'm to blame."

Before she knew how it all happened Dorothy was in Dick's arms, sobbing fitfully.

"But why did you do it, dear? Haven't you seen the papers? We've been nearly frantic."

"I almost telegraphed dad. I was prepared for even his 'I told you so.' And then I saw the sign, 'Waitress Wanted,' and I thought it would be a lark to earn my own way home. It's been hard, Dickie, but—"

The limited carried an extra passenger when it left St. Michael. The Pullman folk were rather curious and amused at the solicitude with which an aristocratic-looking young man peeled eggs and unwrapped sandwiches for an equally aristocratic-looking but ravenously hungry young woman.

A Letter Changed.

She was a stenographer who would leave out sentences, paragraphs, too, when she couldn't read the hieroglyphics in her book during the two weeks that she lingered with an advertising agency.

The head of the agency was away for a couple of days. A client telegraphed that he was coming to the city. Would Mr. Williamson be in his office? The president's secretary dictated a reply: "Sorry. Mr. Williamson is away trap shooting; will return Thursday."

The telegram was dispatched. A duplicate of it was placed on the president's desk to let him see that the client's wire had been taken care of. This is what he read: "Sorry. Mr. Williamson is away trap shooting. Will return Thursday."—Judge.

THIS paper has a plan which we think will be helpful and also save expense to your organization. Postal cards cost one cent each, and in addition to the cost of printing it takes a great deal of your time to address these cards for mailing. Why not advertise your meetings in the newspaper like sample advertisement below? This advertisement you can insert in this paper for $1.00 for one issue. Oftentimes you cannot reach your members through the mail because the time is too short. With the newspaper you can reach them the same night. Everybody reads it and they would look for these advertisements.

We think this plan will save you money, and we are sure it will save you a great deal of labor. If the organizations in this city join this plan it will be a great success and it will relieve all the secretaries of a great deal of work. Won't you bring this matter before your association and have some action taken?
