HANDSAKER TALKS "OREGON DRY 1910"

J. J. Handsaker, of Portland, gave two excellent addresses at the Methodist church last Sunday morning and evening. Among other things he said: According to comparative statistics compiled through many years' experience teaches us that one boy out of every ten and one girl out of every eight homes are required to feed the saloon. The growth of the prohibition idea throughout the United States and the world can be traced to certain causes.

The spirit of lawlessness is always present where the saloon is found. The saloon is our most fragrant violator of law. He then gave a synopsis of economic conditions as found in a large number of Oregon towns. People under normal conditions have about so much money to spend. Every dollar put into the saloon takes so much money out of the channel of legitimate trade. The grocer, the clothing man, the dry goods store have just so much less business.

Statistics were given to show this principle in towns of the West where local option had been tried with officials who were not afraid of their duty. One county in particular Mr. Handsaker brought to our notice—Lane, in which is situated the city of Eugene. The conditions there are such that an attempt at resubmission failed 5 to 1. He paid his respect of the Capital Journal, Salem, which gave out report that 177 of Eugene's leading business men had signed a remonstrance against the present local option law. Only 3 of the 177 have any prominence in business circles of Eugene. A number of the 177 are men who have paid fines or been imprisoned for illegal selling of liquor.

He answered the salient thrust of the liquor interests, "It hurts business" in a masterly way. Tampa, Florida, and Portland, Maine, are cities each having 60,000 population, Tampa has 60 open saloons with less than $6,000,000 in savings deposits; Portland with six months of winter and surrounded with the proverbial New England soil, with no saloons has in excess of $47,000,000 in savings deposits. Mr. Handsaker handled the subject "Oregon Dry 1910" in such a convincing manner that an offering of $37.15 was made toward the prosecution of the work.

VALE CHAMBER OPPOSES OTIS

erty in said proposed county to maintain a county government.

Therefore, Be it Resolved; that we deplore the action of the residents of Drewsey, Oregon, in seeking to initiate a bill for the establishment of Otis county, and request the electors of the state to vote against said measure.

During the tallest of the evening arguments showed that 95 per cent of the taxpayers of the proposed Otis county were opposed to the creation of Otis for the following reasons:

That the county will have to assume part of the indebtedness of the counties from whose territory it is taken; that a court house and jail will have to be erected and salaries paid a number of officers; that a year will elapse before a tax can be levied and collected; that the county will be in debt at least $100,000 within the first year.

That every bill will have to be paid for in warrants; that with no prospects of such warrants being paid for in 15 or twenty years, they will start off at a discount of 30 or 40 per cent—in other words the new county will have to pay a premium of 30 or 40 per cent on everything purchased; that those having only personal property will move out of the new county to escape the heavy taxation.

That Otis county is wanted only by a few property owners in the over-ambitious hamlet of Drewsey; that Drewsey is 18 miles from the proposed line of railroad, and that when such road is constructed the county seat would then be removed to some point on the trans-Oregon road; that the money spent in erection of county buildings will be a total loss; that the taxation necessary to support a county organization would be a great burden; and that there can be but little future development because practically all the land susceptible of cultivation is now in private ownership.
