

A CHANCE TO WIN A HOME

In the lonesome cabin by the Malheur river a bachelor you will find, and after I have fulfilled that promise made to Uncle Sam, and by which I mean to stand, if he would give me some of his fertile land in Oregon, I never once regretted it. I have made me a little home there, it has brought me a little cash, till no more I need to worry where I will get my bread and meat.

In this little cabin, where I spent the happy hours of nineteen fourteen—you may talk about the cooking that your mother did for you, say to "batch it" and to "rough it" would be beyond you, and that it takes a man with an iron will to go out into the hills and make a homestead—I find that it is the life I love. In the lonesome cabin by the river, you can look back to the old home where you spent your childhood days, the orchard, its fruit, picture the shady green spots by the old mill pond, and the sparkling springs of fresh water, and compare it to the old lonesome cabin on the homestead, around which the coyotes howl, the scorpions creep, and horned toads go crawling by.

Yet when I look back there is nothing quite so homelike as the lonesome cabin by the river, with its three tiny windows, where I see the train each day in the distance, go whistling through our prosperous state, bringing with it car loads of immigrants to the so-called desert lands.

I have resided on my little homestead in "the little lonesome cabin by the river" patiently waiting, watching, hoping to meet some shy little mate whom I might offer to share life's happiness with—but that shy little maid I have not met so far—so if there are any young ladies in this country, who wish to have a home of their own, speak up, write me, and do not be backward.

A Talk to Women on "Economy"

A Bit of Information For the Buyers of the Family on Consistent and Economical Purchasing

Women are the shoppers of the family Upon them devolves the responsibility for an economical expenditure of the household funds.

THEY ARE ON THE ALERT FOR BARGAINS!

But there is only one kind of a bargain, and that is the bargain of merit. IT IS ECONOMY.

Economical buying consists not in the getting of an article at a small price, but in getting an article of quality without paying more than it is worth.

Women are careful shoppers, but even the shrewdest of them are sometimes humbugged. An article is not always a bargain because it is plastered with a placard announcing a 50 per cent reduction. Generally the price has been raised before it has been reduced, for be sure no merchant is going to sell you goods for less than they cost him, unless those goods are so worthless they are a drug on the market and without value to you. Merchants cannot do that sort of thing and remain in business, for their losses would soon bankrupt them.

WHEN YOU ARE READY FOR REAL ECONOMICAL BUYING FOR GETTING FULLEST POSSIBLE VALUES FOR YOUR MONEY AND EVERY ARTICLE OF GENUINE QUALITY, COME TO US.

We'll do the rest. It is our way of doing business—and it wins.

Satisfaction is our slogan

Does a man, this one pauses to inquire on the eve of a hard winter, ever become so poor that his wife doesn't want to dig up for the down-trodden?

A woman is busier in the winter than in the summer; in the winter she does the usual worrying about burglars, and also expects the furnace to set the house on fire.

The world would be much more satisfactory if pups would remain pups.

There are some men you can't treat right.

FOR SALE—One 20th century grander, nearly new, having been used one month only. Will sacrifice at $125 if taken soon. Cost $170. Inquire at the Enterprise office.—adv 1-2.

Typewriter Gives Business Standing

The small town merchant, the rural business man or the farmer who uses a typewriter has the advantage over the man who does not.

The typewriter not only saves time in writing letters and making out bills, but it adds prestige and reputation to the user.

The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter is especially adapted to use in rural districts because it will stand more wear and does not require an expert operator. By following the instructions we will give you, you will have no trouble learning.
