A bad young Pi-Ute, who falsely called himself my son, turned against me. He went and told the white man false, il tidings against me. The white man believed the lie that young Wine-muc told him. Then the whites, without investigating the case, sent men who took our horses and killed some of my family. Wan-a-mo-co-ee could not stand this. His chiefs and young men clamored for war and rerenge. I told them to take it, and he war commenced. Some time ago. we made a treaty to be at peace with he white man again. I saw it was no use to fight a people as numerous as the blades of grass in our valleys. so I told my people to stop and live at peace with the white man. They aid they would die fighting the whit
