FUTURITIES

JUST what the future holds for Vale and this section of country cannot be foretold with certainty for another six months. The endeavors to get the Warm Springs project going have been crowned with success to date, but there are those who object to rapid development and how far they will go to delay the matter remains to be seen.

The reclamation department in recommending the appropriation of $400,000 for the dam did the best they could for us and President Wilson and Secretary Lane deserve kind remembrance from our people for their efforts. The $400,000 would complete the dam and then those who had new lands might await the pleasure of those who held the key to the distribution system.

The dam would not be completed under two or three years and at a cost far in excess of $400,000, as the overhead charges on government work is always excessive.

Section twelve of the reclamation extension act would shut out any possibility of getting the improvement except through private capital in the end. Those who have obtained a competence through the use of the present system, can wait and are willing to wait. Those who do not care to farm intensively are willing to wait. Those who are desirous of getting the most out of the land and those who have no water at all are not willing to wait. It is now or never with them and they are well able to pay the small charge that will be made for water.

Those who are promoting other activities and hoping for government aid may be disappointed at the turn things have taken, but this country must be developed now or lie stagnant for a generation. If neither Warm Springs nor Bully creek shall be constructed and the land watered within the next two years there will be an exodus from the county rather than an influx of population.

The Stock-raising Homestead law will not do it all. Those who own the ranges will want a little ranch to raise hay for wintering their stock. The county would soon become the home of ten thousand stock raisers instead of 100. Hundreds of those who are taking advantage of the new law are those who have ranches in the valleys; they see into the future and know that the grass on their range homestead will be greatly increased by care and will supplement their present holdings with a summer range of great and increasing value.

Delving into the future is poor business for anyone but those who professionally do so as fortune tellers. Nevertheless history and present examples may be drawn upon for imagining what the future might be.

Just a few years since and the Twin Falls country was a desert and the first attempts at farming with the water of that region resulted in condemnation of the country. Today it is a country of money making farmers and high priced land. Caldwell and Nampa, Parma and Payette are fairly indicative of what may be done.

Dead Ox lands which the writer has traveled over before the water was spread over the land, are now selling for $150 and $200 per acre. Under the Shoestring ditch with the yearly charge of about $4.25 for water, farmers are making more than good and the land cannot be touched for less than $150 to $200 per acre.

With all these examples right at hand and a world of precedent, how is it that there are people who object to the paltry charge under the Warm Springs project, of less than $30 per acre. Is it a fact that the lands are not worth it? We note that those who are farming do not want to sell for a trifle.

It is now or never with us. With a "long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together" Vale and Ontario will double their population in less than two years.

BULLY CREEK

SUITS and counter suits are the prevailing conditions on Bully creek today, but there is a ray of sunshine breaking through the clouds brought about through the sale of the Warm Springs bonds. While the values must be created on Bully creek by water and in the valley they have already been created, that creation has been through the agency of water, and there is water in Bully creek. Let us be patient and keep our nerves steady; common sense will prevail in the end and our friends who have furnished money and those who have furnished material may hope for something if the right course is pursued.
