It is not an army we must shape and train for war; it is a nation.—Woodrow Wilson.

DON'T DESERT DO YOUR PART
Desertion from the army in time of war is second only to treason as the most dangerous crime possible to commit against the nation. The deserter is meted the same tragic fate as is given the traitor.—Those who stay at home have many important duties to perform, the extent of which are limited only by their ability to do useful things. Peace and order must be maintained at home, crops must be raised and conserved, finances must be furnished, Red Cross work must be done.

We have watched with awe the wonderful accomplishments of our enemy and have praised, if not admired, the German efficiency. True, it is the efficiency of an autocracy; but when tested, if we do not prove that the efficiency of a democracy excels that of Prussianism, we must inevitably be defeated and lose the war we have undertaken in the interests of mankind. Young and old, men and women, rich and poor, strong and weak, each and every one of us can serve, and must serve our nation in this great time of need. It is the great task of the people of this nation to apply the natural individual efficiency for which Americans are justly famed in a collective effort, thus co-ordinating our every force and asset.

PINCH PENNYISM VS. HOME PATRIOTISM.
It should not be necessary to urge people to buy where it is most to their interest—especially where the little word "most" means as much as it does when you are considering the question of buying from the home merchant, or from the outside firm, traveling agent, or mail order house.

The only way that the mail order house can surpass the local seller is by cutting the price, and the only way they can cut the price below that of the local seller is to deliver imitation products of inferior quality.

Besides it is only by virtue of each member of our community being individually prosperous that we can expect a "good" town and "progressive" farms. It is to our general interest to deal with one another. Yet we are all often guilty of disregarding our best interests and become ensnared by the apparent gain of a penny saved. For their own convenience and satisfaction consumers should when possible insist on using Malheur-county-grown products, the buying public should patronize the local stores, the merchants should buy "Made in Oregon" products as often as they can.

In fact the interests of the local community should be considered by you. Without your trade and the trade of your neighbors the merchant cannot survive; and with his departure will go your neighbors for we, outside our business classifications, are all members of the same social community and must pull together. Farmer, business man, professional man, official, tradesman, housewife, each and all have a direct interest in the prosperity of the community in which they live, and work and do their eating. Let us be patriotic in a home sense as well as in a national way.

"Crooked politics and crooked business," "Chicago grain-gamblers," "pacifist and pro-German members of Congress," as the New York World bitterly characterizes the enemies of the Food-Control Act, succeeded in delaying this important war-measure for three months, says the Literary Digest. But while Congress talked, the President and Mr. Hoover, another editor notes, were "quietly perfecting quick-action plans, the details of which can be swiftly carried out." The bill, as finally passed on August 8, according to George Washington correspondent, "embodies virtually everything the President requested and contains little that he does not want."

To the New York American the new law seems "in all respects the most drastic and far-reaching piece of legislation ever enacted by the American Congress." In Washington, according to several press correspondents, the bestowal of such powers is regarded as the longest step toward state socialism ever taken by the national Government. The Food-Control Act means, in the opinion of Mr. C. W. Gilbert, of the New York Tribune, that "man, who has harnessed the physical forces of nature to serve his ends, is now trying under the stress of war to harness the economic forces." Hitherto we thought we could not interfere with the law of supply and demand. The nation has now decided that this fundamental economic law must give way to the needs of the nation. And though the Food-Control Act specifically states that its provisions end with the close of hostilities, this writer is assured that "its effect will be to end once and for all the chaos of the unregulated individual control of the nation's food."

In the August 25 issue of Colliers Weekly, Stephen Borsal, special war correspondent reports Field Marshal Von Hindenburg as saying during an interview at the time of the first big drive against the Russians: "If the United States of America ever is called upon in the future to improvise an army—God forbid it; the thought of still further expanding the war area is a horrible one—it will be a great army that is improvised. After all, in modern warfare, intelligence is the one indispensable attribute, and you Americans will not have to improvise that; you will only have to organize it and direct it into war industries. But if intelligence is lacking, there can be no useful organization or successful improvisation. The foreign press, even the papers of our enemies, have paid me many undeserved compliments, but I tell you now that our victories are due entirely to the intelligence and devotion to duty, of the German soldier."

BE RIGHT AND SPEAK OUT.
John Purroy Mitchell, New York's boy mayor, who has a reputation of a regular T. R. fighter, and who may be the next Democratic candidate for president, was asked recently by Julian Street: "No matter how straight and clean a man may wish to be, doesn't he have to compromise a little bit now and then if he's in politics? Doesn't he have to balance one man, or one crowd, against another? Doesn't he have to trim and be artful, sometimes?"

"No," returned the mayor promptly. "A man in public office has to associate sometimes with men he doesn't like to associate with, but the idea of being 'slick' or 'playing the game' is the old idea—the Tammany idea. I don't believe a man has to stoop to such devices. To my mind there is only one course to pursue: Be right and speak out."

Although it was natural and to be expected, yet the earnestness evidenced at the organization meeting of the Malheur County Council of Patriotic Service in County Judge McKnight's office last Monday afternoon could not help but be noticed and deserves comment and appreciation. While it is hoped that no anarchistic or traitorous acts will be attempted in Malheur county it was the determination of the citizens present that every step should be taken to frustrate any plans for destruction of life or property, and to offer organized assistance to the sheriff and the government in enforcing the laws, should such become necessary at any time. The objects of organizing the council are all for direct help in the prosecution of the war, and the value of such will be greatly appreciated.

Along with the radical and irresponsible I. W. W.'s do we place the hypocritical and crafty seeking political demagogue. We are a nation in war. If political parties cannot keep out of the situation the people will leave the parties deserted. We want nationalism, patriotism, service, not sectionalism, special privilege and office hunting. We want a business-like administration in very branch of the government.

And still does the bitter contest continue between the Boise papers as to which can daily produce the bigger headlines. Let truth and information replace sensationalism and "say-so" stories.
